Machineguns Posted At All
Entrances to City

VIENNA, Feb. 28 — (UP) — Troops and police in all potential trouble centers were reported today to be under a state of "semi alarm" as Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg determined to suppress illegal Nazi activities.

It was even rumored, without confirmation, that detachments of soldiers and policemen were hidden in towers and other vantage points in Vienna, awaiting Nazi disorders.

Graz, capital of Nazi Styria province, was regarded as the most dangerous spot. Motorized troops and police, sent there yesterday to prevent a reported Nazi plan to march on the city, remained on guard.

By government order, Graz university and schools throughout Styria were closed to make it more difficult for Nazi youths to assemble.

The dispatch of troops and picked police to Graz was regarded as the first dramatic notice to Nazis that a clean up was under way.

Minister May Act

Dr. Arthur Von Seyss-Inquart, Nazi party minister of interior and public security, who is at the same time a devout Roman Catholic and a close friend of Schuschnigg, was expected to go to Graz today or tomorrow to confer with police, chiefs of the governmental fatherland front and prominent Nazis at a round table conference.

It was understood that Seyss-Inquart would announce that Schuschnigg had decided uncompromisingly to suppress all illegal Nazi activity throughout the country.

Seyss-Inquart is the nominal leader of the clean up. Actually, Schuschnigg is in personal command.

Nominally Seyss-Inquart is to go

W. P. A. TO SEND REPRESENTATIVE FOR JAIL STUDY

A representative of the state W.P.A. headquarters in Columbus will come to Circleville this week to investigate the proposed project for an addition to the city building.

Carl C. Leist, solicitor, conferred with Dr. Carl Watson, state W. P. A. administrator, Saturday and was informed the representative would be sent to study the proposition.

City officials hope to construct an addition at the rear of the municipal building to house a garage, modern jail and health offices. The cost has been estimated at $20,000.

MEETINGS TO BE CALLED

Penalties For Failure To Comply Disclosed

Benefit payment rates and acreage allotments for principal crops under the new $440,000,000 farm program for 1938 were announced in Washington D. C., Monday, by the department of agriculture.

Pickaway county compliance officials under the Agriculture Adjustment act and farm leaders are awaiting official notification of all details concerning the program before calling community meetings at various places in the county to explain the program to interested persons.

Sharp changes were made in the soil conservation program to make it conform to the new farm program which provides for increased benefit payments, establishment of marketing quotas on a two-thirds vote of growers, high loan rates for storage of supplies, stiff penalties for noncompliance, acreage allotments for principal crops and continuation of soil conservation practices.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace served notice that penalties provided in the act will be strictly enforced on farmers failing to comply with the new program of acreage and marketing control.

Provisions of the program by principal commodities:

Wheat
1938 acreage allotment of 62,500, 000 compared with 81,000,000 acres planted for 1937 harvest.

Farmers who plant within their allotment will receive a benefit of 12 cents a bushel on the normal yield of planted acres. Each acre planted in excess of the allotment will be penalized at the rate of 96 cents a bushel on the normal yield.

OHIO DEATH TOLL FIXED AT EIGHT FOR WEEK-END

BY UNITED PRESS
Ohio's week-end accident toll was at least eight lives.

Emory Jambor, 74, and Peter Schmidt, 55, were traffic victims at Cleveland.

Miss Martha Radcliff, 23, and Robert Anderson, 26, were killed when an automobile driven by Franklin Stabner, 24, skidded from the Harding highway, eight miles west of Marion, and struck a tree. Stabner was injured slightly.

John C. Hammer, 56, a brakeman, was killed when he fell beneath a car while working in the Erie railroad yards at Marion.

Edward Taylor, 33, of Buchtel, burned to death in his automobile near Nelsonville. Authorities believed he had fallen asleep in the car and that a cigaret set fire to the upholstery.

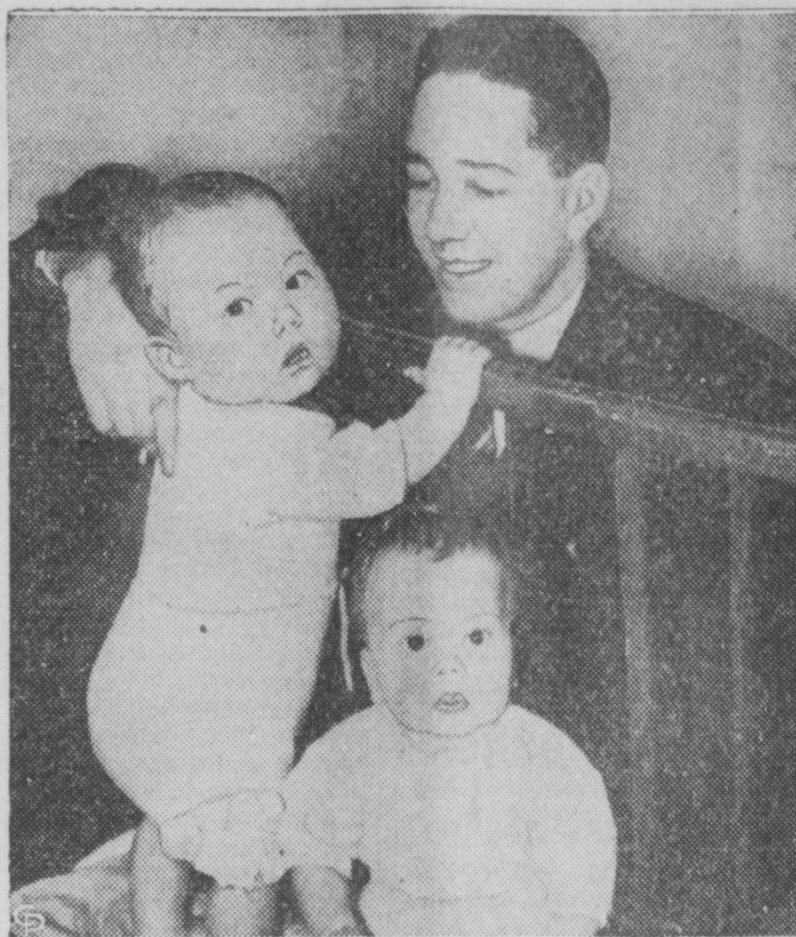

William E. Thomas, 23, was killed when struck by an automobile driven by Boyd Payne, 23, at Portsmouth. Manslaughter charges were filed against Payne.

George Petrut, 63, was killed by a hit-and-run automobile driver at Warren.

False Check Puts Man, 32, In Jail Cell

Bank Employee's Hunch Leads To Arrest Of Chillicothean

Quick work on the part of Harold Hott, First National bank assistant cashier, resulted in the arrest of William Hixon, 32, of 53 North Central avenue, Columbus, Saturday, on a charge of forging a $43 check.

Hixon was arrested by Patrolman Fred Fitzpatrick in a W. Main street beer parlor after Mr. Hott became suspicious of a check he had cashed.

The check was written on the First National bank of Chillicothe and the name of John H. Black was forged, officers said.

Hixon told officers that Mr. Black was a Chillicothe contractor, Chief William McCready and Sheriff Charles Radcliff took Hixon to Chillicothe where he contended he had helped plaster a home on Plum street. He pointed out a home on Plum street where he was supposed to have worked for the contractor. A woman at the residence told officers she had lived there for 12 years and during that time no plastering had been done.

Officers said the check was presented at the bank by Miss Laura Hixon, of Circleville, niece of the man held. Miss Hixon was not held. Hixon admitted the charge filed by Mr. Hott and was bound to the grand jury under $2,500 bond by Mayor W. B. Cady. He

PERSHING SHOWS IMPROVEMENT; TAKES FLUIDS THROUGH MOUTH

TUCSON, Ariz., Feb. 28.—(UP)—Gen. John J. Pershing, displaying vitality that surprised physicians, rallied today and took nourishment through the mouth for the first time in four days.

The commander of the American Expeditionary force and the only living man to hold the rank of general of the armies had a restless night, but at dawn his condition began to improve.

NAZIS ABOLISH AGE LIMIT FOR WARTIME SERVICE

BERLIN, Feb. 28 — (UP) — Germany today abolished the age limit for military service of retired, regular and reserve officers under a decree issued by the supreme command of the armed forces.

As a result of the decree retired officers are liable to military service as long as they fulfill medical requirements regardless of age. The age limit for military service generally has been 45 years.

The new order is applicable to officers who retired from the imperial army and the Reichswehr before the Nazis took over control, as well as officers who have gone on the retirement list since that time.

Some such move had been expected since Fuehrer Adolf Hitler, in his speech to the Reichstag on Feb. 20, intimated that the German army would be strengthened.

WRIGHT FREE, REQUESTS HIS NAME BE FORGOTTEN

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 28.—(UP)—The case against Paul A. Wright was stricken from the court records today and the former airport manager went into seclusion in a quiet hotel, freed from a psychiatric ward less than four months after he killed his wife and his friend, John B. Kimmel. "If it's humanly possible," he said, "the public will never hear of Paul Wright again."

STRAWBOARD TO RESUME

Operations will be resumed at the Container Corporation plant in Circleville, Tuesday. Employees of the straw and beater rooms will begin work Monday at midnight. The machines will start at 6 a. m. Tuesday.

RUSSIANS CROSS BORDER, TOKYO'S TROOPS CHARGE

TOKYO, Feb. 28 — (UP) — A Japanese navy communiqué from Korea said today that 130 Soviet soldiers crossed the Manchukuoan border Friday and Saturday near Mount Norimi, southeast of Wuchatzu near the Korean town of Kelkon.

The communiqué said it was believed most soldiers withdrew but that several remained in Manchukuo territory yesterday and the Korean army therefore was guarding the area carefully.

FOSTER-MOTHER SAVES COCKER SPANIEL PUPS

SHERBORN, Mass., Feb. 28 — (UP) — Quintuplet cocker spaniel puppies were "doing fine" today after receiving nourishment from a foster-mother flown 450 miles.

The real mother's milk soured and the puppies faced starvation. The owner, Mrs. Harriet Owen, telephoned M. G. Denlinger, a Washington, D. C., kennel operator, and arranged to rent a cocker spaniel as foster-mother. She chartered a plane at Boston airport to bring the dog here.

Bullet Nips Gun Career Of Student

Graduate Student At Ohio State Wounded Trying Detroit Robbery

DETROIT, Feb. 28 — (UP) — The plan of an Ohio State university to pay his college expenses through a series of robberies was frustrated today by a police bullet.

Frank J. Hendricks, 24, Alliance, O., was shot by police as he fled from a gasoline station robbery. The bullet struck him in the thigh. Hospital attendants said the wound is not critical.

From his hospital bed, Hendricks told police he robbed a gasoline station operator of $38 "because I needed the money to pay my tuition fee." He said that he also needed money to cover $100 in worthless checks he had passed on the university campus at Columbus.

Hendricks said he had been living at 1932 Waldeck avenue in Columbus. A newspaper clipping found in his pocket revealed that he was a star football player at Mt. Union college near Alliance before he enrolled as a graduate student in the college of physical education at Ohio State.

The student told officers he stole a gun in Columbus and came here a week ago. The gas station robbery, he said, was the first of a series of holdups he had planned. He said it took him several days to "work up enough courage to pull the job."

RAIL OFFICIALS TO TALK WIGWAG AT TOWN GRADE

County commissioners will go to Derby Tuesday to meet with officials of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad at 10 a. m. to discuss the proposed installation of flasher or wigwag signals at a grade crossing.

The meeting was arranged by the commissioners after residents of the village had asked for a better signal system. Signs are used at the present time.

TRUCKERS CROSS BORDER, TOKYO'S TROOPS CHARGE

TOKYO, Feb. 28 — (UP) — A Japanese navy communiqué from Korea said today that 130 Soviet soldiers crossed the Manchukuoan border Friday and Saturday near Mount Norimi, southeast of Wuchatzu near the Korean town of Kelkon.

The communiqué said it was believed most soldiers withdrew but that several remained in Manchukuo territory yesterday and the Korean army therefore was guarding the area carefully.

TRUCKERS CROSS BORDER, TOKYO'S TROOPS CHARGE

The county treasurer's office was crowded Monday, last day for property owners to pay delinquent accounts to prevent publication of their names this week.

State laws make it mandatory that the delinquent list be published.

DAVEY OUSTER TALKED

Governor Goes On Radio For Address Tonight

COLUMBUS, Feb. 28.—(UP)—Long before the Ohio legislature was to begin its last scheduled session this afternoon, the state house hummed with behind-the-scenes activity inspired by the question of whether sine die adjournment will be postponed to make possible extension of the senate graft committee's investigation of state government.

The nine-week inquiring of the senate committee will end today unless the two houses reconsider the Feb. 28 adjournment date.

Three was uncertainty at noon as to where a move to extend the present special session would originate, and whether the powerful administration forces would approve or oppose an extension of time for the graft committee to continue its work.

Davey Men To Meet

An administration spokesman told the United Press that the administration forces would meet sometime before the session is called to decide what their attitude will be on the subject of suspending the rules in order to postpone sine die adjournment.

Sen. Verner E. Metcalfe, R., Washington county, who is a member of the graft committee, said that if no one else moved to extend the session, he would do so himself. He conferred with Rep. William McCulloch, R., Miami county, minority leader in the house.

Rep. McCulloch said they reached no decision on what action Republican members should take but would hold another conference on the subject.

Any impeachment attempt to foster against Gov. Martin L. Davey will be discouraged by Rep. McCulloch, he said.

Although there has been much "off the record" talk about impeachment because of disclosures by the senate committee, there appeared to be no definite plan

JACKSON GIVEN COMMITTEE OKEH FOR REED'S JOB

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—(UP)—The senate judiciary committee today reported favorably the nomination of Robert H. Jackson to be solicitor general. The vote was 10 to 2 with Sen. William H. King, D., Utah, and Sen. Warren Austin, R., Vt., voting against the report.

King and Austin opposed Jackson's nomination to succeed Stanley Reed, former solicitor general elevated to the supreme court, on grounds his speeches attacking monopolistic businesses indicated that he had doubts about the American system of government.

Jackson vigorously denied this charge in prolonged hearings before a subcommittee which required so long to act that Sen. George W. Norris, I., Neb., jokingly accused Austin of filibustering.

Suffering from a heart ailment and impaired kidneys, Pershing lies on a narrow bed in a little cottage named "Apache" for the tribe that gave him his baptism of fire when he was an Indian fighter 52 years ago.

The first bulletin of the day on Pershing's condition was issued shortly after 10 a. m. EST by Dr. Roland Davidson:

"Although General Pershing had a very restless night, he seems somewhat better this morning and took fluids by mouth for the first time in four days. He had been conscious for much longer periods. "The body temperature has returned to almost a normal level and the heart is still competent."

Penalties will be deducted from benefit payments.

Acres taken from wheat must not be diverted to other soil depleting crops. Each acre in excess of the allotment planted in another soil depleting crop, such as corn, rye, oats, etc., will be penalized at the same rate as if it were planted in wheat.

Marketing quotas will not be announced for wheat this year unless congress votes money for parity payments. No acreage allotment will be assigned to farms on which the normal production of wheat for market is less than 100 bushels.

Corn

1938 allotment of 94,000,000 to 97,000,000 acres compared with 99,000,000 acres last year.

Benefit payments for allotted acreage will be 10 cents a bushel. The penalty for exceeding acreage will be 50 cents a bushel for the normal yield on each acre in excess of the allotment.

The A. A. A. designated 566 counties in 12 corn belt states as commercial producing areas in which marketing quotas will be requested if the expected supply—the carryover plus estimated production—exceeds 2,800,000,000 bushels on Aug. 1.

If quotas are approved by growers a penalty of 15 cents a bushel will be assessed on corn marketed in excess of marketing allotments to be announced by Wallace. Farmers cooperating on acreage allotments will be eligible for corn loans next fall, if any are made.

Potatoes

1938 allotment 3,100,000 to 3,300,000 acres, compared with 3,228,000 acres seeded last year.

Benefit payments will be three cents a bushel on allotted acreage. The penalty for exceeding allotments will be 30 cents a bushel.

No marketing quota is provided for potatoes.

For other soil depleting crops the rate of payment on acreage allotments will be approximately $1.25 an acre.

The principal difference in methods of payment between the 1937 and the new program is that payments this year will be on acreage allotments in soil depleting crops, whereas last year payments were made on the basis of the number of acres diverted from soil-depleting crops and for soil-building practices.

SENATORS SEEK DELAY IN DATE OF CONFAB'S END

Metcalf, Graft Committee Member, Prepares To Make Motion

Gov. Davey worked today on the radio talk he will give at 7:45 p. m. over an Ohio network, promising to defend himself against testimony given to the senate committee.

Sen. Bernard Donovan, D., Toledo, a member of the graft committee, was taken to a hospital here today in an ambulance. His physician said it was "for a rest."

Attorney General Herbert S. Duffy requested Sen. J. Ralph Seiden, chairman of the senate committee, to furnish him with a complete transcript of testimony taken during the investigation. Duffy said he wanted to "determine if there is a basis for any action on the part of this office."

It was learned today that 20 Democratic senators and representatives met here last night to discuss the possibility of passage of resolutions extending the session and impeaching the governor.

Speaker Frank Uible of the house said the consensus of opinion was that an impeachment resolution could not pass the house, but that an extension resolution might pass.

U. S. ARMY CORPS READY FOR ANY FOREIGN THREAT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—(UP)—Plans for quick mobilization of manpower and industries to place 1,230,000 well-equipped troops in the field within four months after outbreak of war have been completed by the war department, it was learned today.

Based by the army's general staff on experience of the world war, the plans embrace 10,000 industrial plants capable of instant conversion into manufacture of war materials.

The 10,000 plants were selected from among 20,000 canvassed to determine what specific functions they could perform in a war emergency.

The plan envisages two methods of recruiting troops. One provides universal conscription. The other calls for creation of citizens' committees, which in co-operation with 16,000 American Legion posts, would campaign for volunteers.

While these recruits were being enlisted the war department thrust 300,000 regular army and reserve forces into the field as shock troops. Further calls on both units can boost the total to 600,000 in 30 days, and, with the new recruits, to 1,230,000 within four months.

The plan does not contemplate government operation of the industrial plants. Military officials are said to feel that private operation under federal supervision is more efficient because there would be less chance of a break-down in the economic structure. This difficulty arose during the World War, with disastrous effects on some supplies.

F. D. R. CONGRATULATES ARMY FLIGHT COMMANDER

CITY DELAYS PROGRAM TO LICENSE ALL BICYCLES

Due to delay in obtaining tags, the registration of bicycles in Circleville will not be started for about 10 days, Karl Herrmann, safety director, said Monday.

Registration of the bicycles was scheduled to start Tuesday, March 1, and continue until March 31. Mr. Herrmann hoped to obtain tags from the penitentiary but he was informed they could not be supplied. The order has been placed with a Columbus firm.

All bicycles in the city must be registered. The fee is 25 cents. A metal tag furnished the registrant must be fastened securely to the vehicle. For registration of a change of ownership a fee of 10 cents is charged. The registration will be in charge of the police department.

CARS HIT IN BRIDGE

Autos driven by W. W. Mr. Wheeler was driving north on the highway and Mrs. Eblin was driving south. No one was hurt.

TROOPS AND POLICE BLOCK GRAZ MARCH

to Graz in response to an invitation sent him last week by Nazis and Nazi sympathizers, who want him to negotiate with the government, particularly to seek permission for Nazis to display their emblems and give the Nazi salute. But Seyss-Inquart actually goes as a government leader to inform Nazis that they must obey the government.

There were indications that prompt government action at Graz yesterday halted, without the firing of a shot and without even an arrest, a threatened uprising. Graz is 80 percent Nazi, it is estimated, and the people of the whole province are not much less inclined proportionately toward Nazism. The government received information which led it to believe that from 40,000 to 50,000 Styrian Nazi peasants were going to march on Graz yesterday by every road. It was even alleged that the Nazis intended to occupy the postoffice and telegraph and telephone offices and provincial government buildings.

Troops, Planes Ready

At midday motorized units from the Vienna army garrison raced roaring into the streets of the city. Trucks, tanks and armored cars and an estimated three battalions of troops were in the column. Airplanes began circling over the city and environs, watching for any columns of Nazis.

Graz looked like a city in war time. Squads of troops with machine guns were posted at all approaches to the city. Every public building, every bridge, every commanding street intersection had its heavily armed guard detail. There were even some light field pieces.

Just after the arrival of the motorized troops, the roads outside the city began to fill with peasants. The troops hastily took position and ordered them to turn back. They did so peacefully.

Toward evening it was announced laconically that the troops had defended the city successfully from danger of a march on it, and as all was peaceful most of the troops were withdrawn to inconspicuous positions.

But meantime the government had sent a big force of picked police from Vienna, including many operatives of the secret political branch.

It was evident that the danger was not past. The United Press correspondent reported that many Nazis in Graz continued to wear Nazi emblems, and that Nazis in the provinces wore their full uniforms in defiance of a government ban. Nazi flags flew from some buildings. Nazis collected money in the coffee houses, the collectors announcing that "Storm One"—the Nazi storm troop organization—needed money for the "struggle." Nazis circulated "demands" of various sorts.

was committed to the county jail after failure to give bond.

Mr. Hott said he became suspicious of the check after he noticed the words "general contractor" had been abbreviated under the signature of Black. He explained a general contractor ordinarily would have checks bearing his name and would not use counter checks.

Officers said Hixon has previously served time for forgery in Franklin county. An investigation was being conducted on a $37 check said to have been issued in Chillicothe. They were unable to locate a contractor in Chillicothe named John H. Black.

Gerald McQuirt, of 130 W. Ohio street, was arrested by city police at noon Monday for investigation in a check case.

Police said McQuirt attempted to pass an alleged $15 forged check at the First National bank.

TWO 'PIONEERS' VISIT IN CITY

Billy carries "Bonus" in his saddlebag.

Last week young Kellstadt narrowly escaped injury in an accident on a steep hill near West Newton. An issue of the West Newton newspaper published the following account of the accident: "A member of the 1938 Northwest Territory Historical Expedition narrowly escaped death when a timber cart overturned on its way down a steep hill near West Newton."

"He was William Kellstadt, wagon-driver of the expedition. The accident occurred in a wooded section about a mile and a half west of West Newton on Route 31.

Driver Kellstadt, seated on top of a four-foot timber about 25 feet long, was thrown off the log and almost under the two horses pulling the wagon when the heavy load turned over. He attempted to jump, but was caught by the log and somersaulted near the horses. He rolled under the horses as they reared and kicked.

"Other members of the tree-cutting party rushed to Kellstadt's aid and grabbed the horses before they could plunge toward him. "Kellstadt was to continue driving the horses down the hillside today. He is nonchalant about the accident.

"It was nothing," he said."

FARM PAYMENT RATES, ACREAGE LIMITS LISTED

County Officials Await Federal Information On Crop Control

(Continued from Page One) Penalties will be deducted from benefit payments. Acreage taken from wheat must not be diverted to other soil depleting crops. Each acre in excess of the allotment planted in another soil depleting crop, such as corn, rye, oats, etc., will be penalized at the same rate as if it were planted in wheat. Marketing quotas will not be announced for wheat this year unless congress votes money for parity payments. No acreage allotment will be assigned to farms on which the normal production of wheat for market is less than 100 bushels.

Corn 1938 allotment of 94,000,000 to 97,000,000 acres compared with 99,000,000 acres last year. Benefit payments for allotted acreage will be 10 cents a bushel. The penalty for exceeding acreage will be 50 cents a bushel for the normal yield on each acre in excess of the allotment.

The A. A. C. designated 566 counties in 12 corn belt states as commercial producing areas in which marketing quotas will be requested if the expected supply of the carryover plus estimated production exceeds 2,800,000,000 bushels on Aug. 1.

If quotas are approved by growers a penalty of 15 cents a bushel will be assessed on corn marketed in excess of marketing allotments to be announced by Wallace. Farmers cooperating on acreage allotments will be eligible for corn loans next fall, if any are made.

It was learned today that 20 Democratic senators and representatives met here last night to discuss the possibility of passage of resolutions extending the session and impeaching the governor.

Speaker Frank Uible of the house said the consensus of opinion was that an impeachment resolution could not pass the house, but that an extension resolution might pass.

U. S. ARMY CORPS READY FOR ANY FOREIGN THREAT

WASHINGTON Feb. 28.—(UP)

Plans for quick mobilization of manpower and industries to place 1,230,000 well-equipped troops in the field within four months after outbreak of war have been completed by the war department, it was learned today.

Based by the army's general staff on experience of the world war, the plans embrace 10,000 industrial plants capable of instant conversion into manufacture of war materials.

The 10,000 plants were selected from among 20,000 canvassed to determine what specific functions they could perform in a war emergency.

The plan envisages two methods of recruiting troops. One provides universal conscription. The other calls for creation of citizens' committees, which in co-operation with 16,000 American Legion posts, would campaign for volunteers.

While these recruits were being enlisted the war department thrust 300,000 regular army and reserve forces into the field as shock troops. Further calls on both units can boost the total to 600,000 in 30 days, and, with the new recruits, to 1,230,000 within four months.

The plan does not contemplate government operation of the industrial plants. Military officials are said to feel that private operation under federal supervision is more efficient because there would be less chance of a break-down in the economic structure. This difficulty arose during the World War, with disastrous effects on some supplies.

F. D. R. CONGRATULATES ARMY FLIGHT COMMANDER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—(UP)—President Roosevelt today personally will extend congratulations to Lieut. Col. Robert H. Olds, commander of the six flying fortresses which yesterday completed a 12,000-mile flight to South America. Olds will come to the White House with Secretary of War Harry Woodring, bringing letters to Mr. Roosevelt from the president's of Latin-American republics visited on the tour.

OWENS' MARK OKEHED

PARIS, Feb. 28.—(UP)—Disputed track records of two United States athletes, Jesse Owens and Forrest (Spec) Towns, were made official today by the international Amateur Athletic federation. Owens' mark was 10.2 seconds for the 100-meter dash; Towns' was 13.7 for the 110-meter high hurdles.

COURT REVERSED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—(UP)—The supreme court today reversed a seventh circuit court of appeals decision which had affirmed an injunction against picketing of E. G. Swanner company meat shops in Milwaukee on grounds no "labor dispute" existed as basis for the picketing.

PLOT NIPPED

QUITO, Ecuador, Feb. 28.—(UP)—Authorities announced today they had discovered a revolutionary plot in behalf of Velasco Ebarra, former president, who was overthrown in 1936. Many persons were arrested, including Mariano Veintimilla, former congressman, and Alfonso Eguiguren, who was chief of police under Ebarra.

CITY DELAYS PROGRAM TO LICENSE ALL BICYCLES

Due to delay in obtaining tags, the registration of bicycles in Circleville will not be started for about 10 days, Karl Herrmann, safety director, said Monday.

Registration of the bicycles was scheduled to start Tuesday, March 1, and continue until March 31. Mr. Herrmann hoped to obtain tags from the penitentiary but he was informed they could not be supplied. The order has been placed with a Columbus firm. All bicycles in the city must be registered. The fee is 25 cents. A metal tag furnished the registrant must be fastened securely to the vehicle. For registration of a change of ownership a fee of 10 cents is charged. The registration will be in charge of the police department.

CARS HIT IN BRIDGE

Autos driven by W. W. Wheeler, Ashville, Route 1 and Mrs. Viola Eblin, of Circleville, Route 5, were damaged Saturday night when they sideswiped in a bridge on Route 23 about three miles north of Circleville. Mr. Wheeler was driving north on the highway and Mrs. Eblin was driving south. No one was hurt.

to Graz in response to an invitation sent him last week by Nazis and Nazi sympathizers, who want him to negotiate with the government, particularly to seek permission for Nazis to display their emblems and give the Nazi salute. But Seyss-Inquart actually goes as a government leader to inform Nazis that they must obey the government.

There were indications that prompt government action at Graz yesterday halted, without the firing of a shot and without even an arrest, a threatened uprising. Graz is 80 percent Nazi, it is estimated, and the people of the whole province are not much less inclined proportionately toward Nazism. The government received information which led it to believe that from 40,000 to 50,000 Styrian Nazi peasants were going to march on Graz yesterday by every road. It was even alleged that the Nazis intended to occupy the postoffice and telegraph and telephone offices and provincial government buildings.

Troops, Planes Ready

At midday motorized units from the Vienna army garrison raced roaring into the streets of the city. Trucks, tanks and armored cars and an estimated three battalions of troops were in the column. Airplanes began circling over the city and environs, watching for any columns of Nazis.

Graz looked like a city in war time. Squads of troops with machine guns were posted at all approaches to the city. Every public building, every bridge, every commanding street intersection had its heavily armed guard detail. There were even some light field pieces.

Just after the arrival of the motorized troops, the roads outside the city began to fill with peasants. The troops hastily took position and ordered them to turn back. They did so peacefully.

Toward evening it was announced laconically that the troops had defended the city successfully from danger of a march on it, and as all was peaceful most of the troops were withdrawn to inconspicuous positions.

But meantime the government had sent a big force of picked police from Vienna, including many operatives of the secret political branch.

It was evident that the danger was not past. The United Press correspondent reported that many Nazis in Graz continued to wear Nazi emblems, and that Nazis in the provinces wore their full uniforms in defiance of a government ban. Nazi flags flew from some buildings. Nazis collected money in coffee houses, the collectors announcing that "Storm One"—the Nazi storm troop organization—needed money for the "struggle." Nazis circulated "demands" of various sorts.

Mr. Hott said he became suspicious of the check after he noticed the words "general contractor" had been abbreviated under the signature of Black. He explained a general contractor ordinarily would have checks bearing his name and would not use counter checks.

Officers said Hixon has previously served time for forgery in Franklin county. An investigation was being conducted on a $37 check said to have been issued in Chillicothe. They were unable to locate a contractor in Chillicothe named John H. Black.

Gerald McQuirt, of 130 W. Ohio street, was arrested by city police at noon Monday for investigation in a check case.

Police said McQuirt attempted to pass an alleged $15 forged check at the First National bank.

TWO 'PIONEERS' VISIT IN CITY

Billy carries "Bonus" in his saddlebag.

Last week young Kellstadt narrowly escaped injury in an accident on a steep hill near West Newton. An issue of the West Newton newspaper published the following account of the accident:

"A member of the 1938 Northwest Territory Historical Expedition narrowly escaped death when a timber cart overturned on its way down a steep hill near West Newton.

"He was William Kellstadt, wagon-driver of the expedition. The accident occurred in a wooded section about a mile and a half west of West Newton on Route 31.

Driver Kellstadt, seated on top of a four-foot timber about 25 feet long, was thrown off the log and almost under the two horses pulling the wagon when the heavy load turned over. He attempted to jump, but was caught by the log and somersaulted near the horses. He rolled under the horses as they reared and kicked. "Other members of the tree-cutting party rushed to Kellstadt's aid and grabbed the horses before they could plunge toward him.

"Kellstadt was to continue driving the horses down the hillside today. He is nonchalant about the accident.

"It was nothing," he said."

W. C. FIELDS IN ROLE

The Radio Theatre scores another dramatic "beat" when W. C. Fields returns to the air on Monday, March 7, to make his first appearance in a radio play. For this occasion Fields' greatest role has been selected, that of the memorable Professor in "Poppy."

The Radio Theatre production of "Poppy," with Cecil B. DeMille directing, will be broadcast over the Columbia network at 9 p. m. EST. On Broadway and again in the movies W. C. Fields achieved one of his most successful performances in "Poppy." His characterization of Professor Eustace McGargle, of the medicine shows, in the comedy class, is one of the historic performances of the American theatre.

With this production too the Radio Theatre adds another great comedian to the gallery who have made their first radio appearances on this program, a list that includes Jack Benny, George Burns and Gracie Allen, and Bob Burns.

OIL FOR HOW LONG?

FEARS were expressed recently at Washington, in reference to the proposed cent-a-gallon tax on fuel oil, that our national petroleum supply would play out soon. "Present drilled reserves," it was said, would supply oil for less than three years at the present rate of production, which is about 1,000,000,000 barrels a year. The prospect looked bad for the oil industry.

It looks better in a later report from the American Petroleum Institute. The Institute's estimate, based on reserves in known fields, together with new fields where drilling has gone far enough for accurate calculation, gives this country total oil reserves of 15,500,000,000 barrels. That would be about enough to last for 15 years if the recent average rate of consumption were not increased. New reserves found last year amounted to almost one year's supply.

The Institute points out that the "known reserves" are now greater than they have ever been. Yet it is evident that we are draining the total supply very fast, taking and using up nearly two-thirds of the world's production. There is no assurance of finding more reserves as usual, and sooner or later there will be no more.

Meanwhile consumption continues to increase, as new uses are found for this wonderful mineral and more oil is burned for fuel. There is too much of the "eat, drink and be merry" spirit with such resources. We can make oil from coal when we have to, but it will cost more and will not be so good.

NAZI CO-EDS

AERICAN college girls, with their social life, campus leisure and long vacations, might find life rather wearing in Germany. Ease and leisure are gone for German co-eds. The general shortage of labor, resulting from national concentration on armament, makes feminine hands needed in the fields, and the college girls must help.

They are taught, anyway, the principle of all-round service to the state. So the girls must give labor in what otherwise would be vacation time. They are expected to volunteer their services to farmers during the harvest period and go into the factories to relieve regular workers there during their winter holidays. There are regular "academic factory squads" in the industrial section of western Germany. It probably does no harm on the whole. But there must be many of those girl students to whom the transition from mental to physical work comes hard.

An outsider naturally wonders, too, about the quality of German university education under a system which, while making girl students labor like hired men, has also driven into exile so many eminent college professors.

World At A Glance

Far be it from me to favor a censorship of White House news. However, by no means am I convinced that a return to the old written-question-and-answer system of conducting White House interviews would amount to a return to a censorship.

It was not exactly a censorship before. Neither is the present system, altogether the reverse of a censorship.

OF LONG STANDING

It might be apropos to enter into a few details concerning these presidential press conferences. I do not know just how far back they date, but I do know that the White House had them as long ago as the time of Presidents Roosevelt 1st and William Howard Taft. I myself attended a few during the regimes of Presidents Wilson and Harding, and a great many of Presidents Coolidge, Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

It always has been the rule that the president must not be quoted, word for word, except in certain especially permitted cases. Presidential utterances were "put up" to a "White House spokesman." Or, otherwise, somehow, the quotation was indirect.

TWO A WEEK
Traditionally there are two of these conferences a week. Journalistic queries used to be submitted in writing, in advance. When they were answered, a little additional questioning might be permitted, in amplification of presidential rejoinders, but, in the main, the conversation was restricted to prescribed lines. Interrogations which the chief executive chose to disregard simply were ignored.

HARDLY CENSORSHIP

In a fashion this was a censorship, perhaps. Still, when a newspaperman gets an interview, I always have contended that the interviewee is entitled to see his interview and "ok" it before its appearance in print. It is a nuisance and a delay, but I think it is the interviewee's right.

Now, this can not be done at a press conference with the president. At least 100 interviewers are present at such a conference. It is not practicable for the interviewee to indorse so many interviews.

IT'S A CHAT NOW

The written-and-answered system no longer prevails.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

BOOB OR GENIUS, CAPITAL CAN'T SAY

WASHINGTON—This nation's capital, which is accustomed to swank Embassy receptions, New Year's Eve brawls and every conceivable form of politico-social entertainment, still is trying to make up its mind what to think of the Paul V. McNutt reception.

Some say it will make the honor guest President of the United States. Some say it will brand him with the name once applied to Rube Goldberg's comic strip—"Boob" McNutt.

But one thing is obvious. You can't call McNutt a piker. His debut in Washington was one of the most audacious moves in political history. He was like the boy who dodges eggs at the country fair. Almost everyone who came to his party was there to eat, drink and scoff at the honor guest.

Seldom have so many social scavengers hovered around the refreshment table ready to find fault. Seldom have so many social columnists jotted down the gateau mille feuilles, the patisserie viennoise, the vol au vent fin de siècle and every other fancy name sure to rouse resentment out in the wide open spaces.

There was no doubt about it, Paul V. was on the spot—and on the spot purely by his own choosing.

POLITICAL SUICIDE, OR?

As a rule it is criminal tactics for a campaign manager to bring out a candidate more than eight months before a convention. The farther ahead he comes out, the more people can fire at him. Usually such an early debut is political suicide.

McNutt managers, however, claim that in Indiana babies are born discussing politics. And perhaps they are right.

Already it is apparent that 1940 will see the bitterest fight with in the Democratic Party since Al Smith and McAdoo split it wide open in the 1934 New York convention. Already the line is beginning to form on the right with the reactionary died-in-the-wool Democrats of Jack Garner, or on the left with the New Deal progressives of Franklin Roosevelt.

So what could be more natural in any deadlock than compromising upon a good old-fashioned Democrat, who is progressive enough to suit the New Dealers?

There you are, ladies and gentlemen! Step right up and take a good look at Paul V. McNutt!

Funny thing is it might work. Last week's social brawl was a big risk—but after all, McNutt made the first page of every paper in the country. And in politics nobody gets anywhere by keeping his candle under a bushel.

RESTLESS AMBASSADOR

During the first year that Joe Davis was Ambassador to Russia, he was absent from the Soviet capital 199 days. Of these 39 days were counted as on official business, while 110 were counted as leave without pay.

The State Department gave this information to Representative Robert Bacon, staunch New York Republican, who complained that "if it is important enough for us to have an Ambassador at Moscow, it is important enough to have him stay at his post."

Patients Organize for Happy Living

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
I HAVE before me the report of a method of managing high blood pressure that could probably be used by many people with this condition. It consists in forming classes of patients with high blood pressure who meet once or twice a week, and under the direction of a physician or nurse, practice various methods of relaxation and psychological treatment.

Dr. Clendening

The trouble with the treatment of high blood pressure in most cases is that it does not depend on any particular form of treatment, but upon a rearrangement of the patient's entire life, and most people in middle age are not able to rearrange their own lives without help and encouragement from others.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

In these hypertension classes in Boston the only requirement for membership is a high blood pressure. The purpose is to present and to train these individuals in a program of living which will enable them to live consistently at the optimal level of well being which is possible for them.

The three forms of treatment consist in medical care, psychotherapy and diet.

Medical care consists in all methods of treatment that are available in the clinic. It may be the treatment of complications such as varicose veins, diabetes, sinus trouble in the nose, but the fact that the class meets in the hospital makes it easier for these treatments to be carried out.

The diet which is used consists of potatoes, baked and eaten with the skin intact, dark bread and butter, milk, apples and other fresh fruits. This Spartan but, on the whole, well balanced and economic fare, is varied at times and the patients are allowed to go on lapses on holidays or when they go out to dinner with friends and do not wish to appear to be eccentric.

Use of Suggestion Important
The use of suggestion and psychotherapy is very important. In the class progressive relaxation is practiced. This was introduced to the public in a book by Dr. Jacobson in 1934 called "You Must Relax". At each class meeting they have a five to ten-minute relaxation period in which all the muscles of the body are successively put into the state of voluntary relaxation. The patients are taught to relax in class and then practice it once, twice or three times daily during the week.

A very important part of the class treatment is the use of suggestion, which is accomplished by the giving of testimony by the older members. The success of those who have been practicing the method of treatment used in the class is a powerful factor in starting the new members off in the proper spirit of optimism and earnest attention to rules.

The aim of the treatment is not to reduce blood pressure, and people who start to do that are usually pursuing an impossible task. The aim is to allow these patients to attain an optimal level of well being.

CHAPTER 39

LORD SIMON continued with his "solution" of the crime. "I have got the facts of Strickland's financial situation last week," Lord Simon explained to us. "I needn't bore you with them—tedious things, debits. But you can take it from me that he was desperate. He had to have money—snappily too. And he came here to get it."

"You are wonderin' what this plan of his might be. Devilish cunning bit of intrigue. The first thing he had seen when he had begun to figure out his way of eliminatin' his stepmother, was that he would need an accomplice. And the first thing I saw, and I suppose the first thing all of us saw about this murder, was that an accomplice had been there. Hang it, short of something supernatural the murderer had to have an accomplice to escape from the room and leave the door locked, and show no sign of himself on his way of escape two minutes later. And for Strickland there was an obvious assistant all handy and willin'—the chauffeur, Fellowes. But he wasn't such a fool as to speak to Fellowes till he had made up his mind that this week-end was the time."

"Mind you, he knew his ground. It is certain that this idea of murderin' his stepmother had been in his mind a long while, and on all his recent visits he had chatted with the chauffeur. He knew his story. He knew the fellow had been in jail. He knew that his one ambition in life was to get clear of this place with enough money to buy a pub and marry Enid. He knew that he was having some sort of an affair with Mrs. Thurston. And he judged him, and rightly, to be the very man to fall in with his plan."

Here Sergeant Beef interrupted loudly. "Well, I don't believe it," he said, folding his arms. "I know young Fellowes. Rough, if you like, and may 'ave got into a bit of trouble before now. Done a bit of 'ousebreaking I dare say. But not murder. I don't believe it. 'E could put two darts out of it. 'E could put 18 as often as you like, and I don't believe 'e'd ever 'ave 'ad nothink to do with cutting that lady's throat. Straight I don't. Besides, I know who did it."

Lord Simon smiled patiently. "I'm glad to hear of Fellowes' proficiency in the pastime which seems to occupy most of your time and attention, sergeant. But I'm afraid I can't see its relevance quite. Besides, have I asked you to believe our young friend guilty of murder? You must learn the virtue of patience, sergeant. Useful in this job. And don't go jumpin' to conclusions. Where'd we go to? Oh yes. On Friday morning we find Strickland arriving at the station after a week's racin' which might be called disastrous, if you were to put it mildly. He is met by Fellowes who has been seeing a good deal of his girl lately—takin' her out in the car. That may have been disastrous, too. Judgin' from what we have seen of Enid, I don't suppose she was enjoyin' this long waitin', and savin' money, and hopin' before they could get married and own their pub. Besides, one can't imagine that she was delighted at her young man bein' whistled for like a pet dog every time their lady employer was lonely or temperamental. So that Fellowes, too, was probably approachin' breakin' point."

"I don't think that Strickland will have said anything definite then. He knew enough to be pretty sure of Fellowes. But he may have arranged to see him after lunch, or even have asked him whether he would be prepared to come in on something that would see them into Easy street. Can't tell. Anyway, they were celebrating his golden wedding anniversary."

had that time for a chat, alone in the car from the station.

"He had already let Mrs. Thurston know that he would need money, and she, as we know, had drawn £200 ready for him. But here was another difficulty. The man Stall had intercepted, some three weeks ago, a letter from Mrs. Thurston to Fellowes. It was a silly indiscreet letter, the sort of thing that someone as foolish and thoughtless as this lady might well have written. But he had found it sufficient as a means to terrify her into parting with quite large sums of money. The truth is that Mrs. Thurston was generally fond of her husband, and being essentially an innocent soul she had imagined this silly little weakness of hers for a young chauffeur to be a far more terrible thing than it would have seemed to anyone else. At all events, when Strickland got her alone for a minute after lunch and asked her if she had the money ready for him, she had to tell him she had not. Perhaps she had not the time, or perhaps she did not wish, to tell him why she had not. I imagine that the whole thing passed between them in this very room, and in the presence of some of you. A hurried exchange of whispers.

"What had happened, probably, is that Stall had been listening at the telephone extension, when Strickland rang her up on Thursday morning to say he would need the money. And Stall had heard her promise to have it ready for him. Or else Stall had seen the counterfoils in her checkbook, and knew from that she had just drawn the £200. Or he had chosen by chance this time for a last determined blackmail campaign, knowing that he was under notice to quit. At all events he had got wind of the money, and made it clear that he was to have it.

"Finding that he was not to receive this sum, which he had intended to get doubled, Strickland told him his plan. At this point he showed a most horrible sort of determination. He did not hesitate. He had his notions cut and dried and he was going to put them straight into action."

Here Lord Simon hesitated. Full of admiration I watched him light another cigar, before revealing to us what we were now burning to know. He had told us who was the murderer, but his identity was not, I thought, as mysterious as his method, and I wanted to say "Go on! Go on!" while the young man nonchalantly applied a match to his cigar. But he took his time, and when he began to talk again it was from a new angle.

"Wonder? I've done nothing but wonder," I replied irritably. "Even supposing that the rope was let down from the floor above by an accomplice, I don't see how it could have been of much use. I've told you again and again that no one would have had time to climb out onto it, close the window after him, climb up it, and haul it up, before Williams opened the window again. And even if he had, he couldn't have reached us at the door as quickly as Strickland, Fellowes and Norris did."

"What about droppin' down it?" asked Lord Simon.

"The same thing applies. Suppose that there was someone upstairs to haul it in, the murderer would have had to climb out onto it, close the window, drop to the ground, and get away before Williams looked out, and the rope would have had to be hauled up after he had dropped from it. I don't think that those actions were possible. But even if they were, how was it the murderer left no footprints on that soft bed which came out six feet from the wall? And how did he get in again? And how did his accomplice haul in the rope and come downstairs as quickly as that? No. I don't believe it's possible. In fact, I added on a sudden inspiration, "I'm not sure that the ropes were not a blind!"

Lord Simon smiled. "You are right about the first two things," he admitted; "there wouldn't have been time for anyone to have gone up, or down the rope."

"Well, then?"

"It didn't occur to you perhaps that there are other directions in which it is possible to travel?"

"What do you mean?"

"He means," put in Mgr. Smith suddenly from his armchair, "that a rope is not only used to let a man climb, but also to make a man swing."

"Exactly," said Lord Simon; "swinging is the word I want here and hereafter. Strickland knew that he might not have time to climb a rope, or drop down a rope, and establish that unimpeachable alibi which was necessary to him. But he would have time to swing on a rope, as comfortably as you please, from outside Mary Thurston's window to outside his own. All he had to do was to have a rope hung beforehand from the window that was over his own, with the end of it caught and hooked at Mrs. Thurston's and his fire escape, or escape from justice if you like, was ready. As hanging was only necessary to haul the rope in afterwards."

I gasped. Of course! Why hadn't I thought of that? And there were Williams and I talking about the supernatural!

"But Strickland was no fool," continued Lord Simon. "He was judge enough of character to know that Fellowes would not come in on that. For one thing, Fellowes would not have enough to gain by it. There was the will Strickland had made, and Strickland didn't feel that it would be enough inducement to a man to bring him into a murder plot. I think he was right there. Fellowes was not quite such a bad hat as all that. No, Strickland went about it far more cleverly. What he was going to do, he said, was to pinch Mrs. Thurston's jewelry."

"Now that, as you can see, was right in the chauffeur's line of country. He, or Enid's brother, knew just where to plant it afterwards

OIL FOR HOW LONG?

FEARS were expressed recently at Washington, in reference to the proposed cent-a-gallon tax on fuel oil, that our national petroleum supply would play out soon. "Present drilled reserves," it was said, would supply oil for less than three years at the present rate of production, which is about 1,000,000,000 barrels a year. The prospect looked bad for the oil industry.

It looks better in a later report from the American Petroleum Institute. The Institute's estimate, based on reserves in known fields, together with new fields where drilling has gone far enough for accurate calculation, gives this country total oil reserves of 15,500,000,000 barrels. That would be about enough to last for 15 years if the recent average rate of consumption were not increased. New reserves found last year amounted to almost one year's supply.

The Institute points out that the "known reserves" are now greater than they have ever been. Yet it is evident that we are draining the total supply very fast, taking and using up nearly two-thirds of the world's production. There is no assurance of finding more reserves as usual, and sooner or later there will be no more.

Meanwhile consumption continues to increase, as new uses are found for this wonderful mineral and more oil is burned for fuel. There is too much of the "eat, drink and be merry" spirit with such resources. We can make oil from coal when we have to, but it will cost more and will not be so good.

NAZI CO-EDS

AMERICAN college girls, with their social life, campus leisure and long vacations, might find life rather wearing in Germany. Ease and leisure are gone for German co-eds. The general shortage of labor, resulting from national concentration on armament, makes feminine hands needed in the fields, and the college girls must help.

They are taught, anyway, the principle of all-round service to the state. So the girls must give labor in what otherwise would be vacation time. They are expected to volunteer their services to farmers during the harvest period and go into the factories to relieve regular workers there during their winter holidays. There are regular "academic factory squads" in the industrial section of western Germany.

It probably does no harm on the whole. But there must be many of those girl students to whom the transition from mental to physical work comes hard.

An outsider naturally wonders, too, about the quality of German university education under a system which, while making girl students labor like hired men, has also driven into exile so many eminent college professors.

World At A Glance

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

Far be it from me to favor a censorship of White House news. However, by no means am I convinced that a return to the old written-question-and-answer system of conducting White House interviews would amount to a return to a censorship.

It was not exactly a censorship before. Neither is the present system altogether the reverse of a censorship.

OF LONG STANDING

It might be apropos to enter into a few details concerning these presidential press conferences.

I do not know just how far back they date, but I do know that the White House had them as long ago as the time of Presidents Roosevelt 1st and William Howard Taft. I myself attended a few during the regimes of Presidents Wilson and Harding, and a great many of Presidents Coolidge, Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

It always has been the rule that the president must not be quoted, word for word, except in certain especially permitted cases. Presidential utterances were "put up" to a "White House spokesman." Or, otherwise, somehow, the quotation was indirect.

TWO A WEEK

Traditionally there are two of these conferences a week.

Journalistic queries used to be submitted in writing, in advance.

When they were answered, a little additional questioning might be permitted, in amplification of presidential rejoinders, but, in the main, the conversation was restricted to prescribed lines. Interrogations which the chief executive chose to disregard simply were ignored.

HARDLY CENSORSHIP

In a fashion this was a censorship, perhaps.

Still, when a newspaperman gets an interview, I always have contended that the interviewee is entitled to see his interview and "ok" it before its appearance in print. It is a nuisance and a delay, but I think it is the interviewee's right.

Now, this can not be done at a press conference with the president. At least 100 interviewers are present at such a conference. It is not practicable for the interviewee to indorse so many interviews.

IT'S A CHAT NOW

The written-and-answered system no longer prevails.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

BOOB OR GENIUS, CAPITAL CAN'T SAY

WASHINGTON—This nation's capital, which is accustomed to swank Embassy receptions, New Year's Eve brawls and every conceivable form of politico-social entertainment, still is trying to make up its mind what to think of the Paul V. McNutt reception.

Some say it will make the honor guest President of the United States. Some say it will brand him with the name once applied to Rube Goldberg's comic strip—"Boob" McNutt.

But one thing is obvious. You can't call McNutt a piker. His debut in Washington was one of the most audacious moves in political history. He was like the boy who dodges eggs at the country fair. Almost everyone who came to his party was there to eat, drink and scoff at the honor guest.

Seldom have so many social scavengers hovered around the refreshment table ready to find fault. Seldom have so many social columnists jotted down the gateau mille feuilles, the patisserie viennoise, the vol au vent fin de siecle and every other fancy name sure to rouse resentment out in the wide open spaces.

There was no doubt about it, Paul V. was on the spot—and on the spot purely by his own choosing.

POLITICAL SUICIDE, OR?

As a rule it is criminal tactics for a campaign manager to bring out a candidate more than eight months before a convention. The farther ahead he comes out, the more people can fire at him. Usually such an early debut is political suicide.

McNutt managers, however, claim that in Indiana babies are born discussing politics. And perhaps they are right.

Already it is apparent that 1940 will see the bitterest fight with in the Democratic Party since Al Smith and McAdoo split it wide open in the 1934 New York convention. Already the line is beginning to form on the right with the reactionary died-in-the-wool Democrats of Jack Garner, or on the left with the New Deal progressives of Franklin Roosevelt.

So what could be more natural in any deadlock than compromising upon a good old-fashioned Democrat, who is progressive enough to suit the New Dealers?

There you are, ladies and gentlemen! Step right up and take a good look at Paul V. McNutt!

Funny thing is it might work. Last week's social brawl was a big risk—but after all, McNutt made the first page of every paper in the country. And in politics nobody gets anywhere by keeping his candle under a bushel.

RESTLESS AMBASSADOR

During the first year that Joe Davis was Ambassador to Russia, he was absent from the Soviet capital 199 days. Of these 39 days were counted as on official business, while 110 were counted as leave without pay.

The State Department gave this information to Representative Robert Bacon, staunch New York Republican, who complained that "if it is important enough for us to have an Ambassador at Moscow, it is important enough to have him stay at his post."

DIET AND HEALTH

Patients Organize for Happy Living

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
I HAVE before me the report of a method of managing high blood pressure that could profitably be used by many people with this condition.

It consists in forming classes of patients with high blood pressure who meet once or twice a week, and under the direction of a physician or nurse, practice various methods of relaxation and psychological treatment.

The trouble with the treatment of high blood pressure in most cases is that it does not depend on any particular form of treatment, but upon a rearrangement of the patient's entire life, and most people in middle age are not able to rearrange their own lives without help and encouragement from others.

Dr. Clendingen will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

In these hypertension classes in Boston the only requirement for membership is a high blood pressure. The purpose is to present and to train these individuals in a program of living which will enable them to live consistently at the optimal level of well being which is possible for them.

The three forms of treatment consist in medical care, psychotherapy and diet.

Medical care consists in all methods of treatment that are available in the clinic. It may be the treatment of complications such as varicose veins, diabetes, sinus trouble in the nose, but the fact that the class meets in the hospital makes it easier for these treatments to be carried out.

The diet which is used consists of potatoes, baked and eaten with the skin intact; dark bread and butter, milk, apples and other fresh fruits. This Spartan but, on the whole, well balanced and economic fare, is varied at times and the patients are allowed to go on lapses on holidays or when they go out to dinner with friends and do not wish to appear to be eccentric.

Use of Suggestion Important
The use of suggestion and psychotherapy is very important. In the class progressive relaxation is practiced. This was introduced to the public in a book by Dr. Jacobson in 1934 called "You Must Relax". At each class meeting they have a five to ten-minute relaxation period in which all the muscles of the body are successively put into the state of voluntary relaxation.

The patients are taught to relax in class and then practice it once, twice or three times daily during the week.

A very important part of the class treatment is the use of suggestion, which is accomplished by the giving of testimony by the older members. The success of those who have been practicing the method of treatment used in the class is a powerful factor in starting the new members off in the proper spirit of optimism and earnest attention to rules.

The aim of the treatment is not to reduce blood pressure, and people who start to do that are usually pursuing an impossible task. The aim is to allow these patients to attain an optimal level of well being

"I have got the facts of Strickland's financial situation last week," Lord Simon explained to us. "I needn't bore you with them—tedious things, debts. But you can take it from me that he was desperate. He had to have money—snappily too. And he came here to get it.

"You are wonderin' what this plan of his might be. Devilish cunning bit of intrigue. The first thing he had seen when he had begun to figure out his way of eliminatin' his stepmother, was that he would need an accomplice. And the first thing I saw, and I suppose the first thing all of us saw about this murder, was that an accomplice had been there. Hang it, short of something supernatural the murderer had to have an accomplice to escape from the room and leave the door locked, and show no sign of himself on his way of escape two minutes later. And for Strickland there was an obvious assistant all handy and willin'—the chauffeur, Fellowes. But he wasn't such a fool as to speak to Fellowes till he had made up his mind that this week-end was the time.

"Mind you, he knew his ground. It is certain that this idea of murderin' his stepmother had been in his mind a long while, and on all his recent visits he had chatted with the chauffeur. He knew his story. He knew the fellow had been in jail. He knew that his one ambition in life was to get clear of this place with enough money to buy a pub and marry Enid. He knew that he was having some sort of an affair with Mrs. Thurston. And he judged him, and rightly, to be the very man to fall in with his plan."

Here Sergeant Beef interrupted loudly. "Well, I don't believe it," he said, folding his arms. "I know young Fellowes. Rough, if you like, and may 'ave got into a bit of trouble before now. Done a bit of 'ouchin' and I dare say. But not murder. I don't believe it. 'E could put two darts out of three in the double 18 as often as you like, and I don't believe 'e'd ever 'ave 'ad nothink to do with cuttin' that lady's throat. Straight I don't. Besides, I know who did it."

Lord Simon smiled patiently. "I'm glad to hear of Fellowes' proficiency in the pastime which seems to occupy most of your time and attention, sergeant. But I'm afraid I can't see the relevance quite. Besides, have I asked you to believe our young friend guilty of murder? You must learn the virtue of patience, sergeant. Useful in this job. And don't go jumpin' to conclusions. Where had we got to? Oh yes. On Friday morning we find Strickland arriving at the station after a week's racin' which might be called disastrous, if you were to put it mildly. He is met by his lower who has been seeing a good deal of his girl lately—takin' her out in the car. That may have been disastrous, too. Judgin' from what we have seen of Enid, I don't suppose she was enjoyin' this long waitin', and savin' money, and hopin' before they could get married and own their pub. Besides, one can't imagine that she was delighted at her young man bein' whistled for like a pet dog every time their lady employer was lonely or temperamental. So that Fellowes, too, was probably approachin' breakin'-point."

"What about droppin' down it?" asked Lord Simon.

"The same thing applies. Suppose that there was someone upstairs to haul it in, the murderer would have had to climb out onto it, close the window, drop to the ground, and get away before Williams looked out, and the rope would have had to be hauled up had that time for a chat, alone in the car from the station.

"He had already let Mrs. Thurston know that he would need money, and she, as we know, had drawn £200 ready for him. But here was another difficulty. The man Stall had intercepted, some three weeks ago, a letter from Mrs. Thurston to Fellowes. It was a silly indiscreet letter, the sort of thing that someone as foolish and thoughtless as this lady might well have written. But he had found it sufficient as a means to terrify her into parting with quite large sums of money. The truth is that Mrs. Thurston was genuinely fond of her husband, and bein' essentially an innocent soul she had imagined this silly little weakness of hers for a young chauffeur to be a far more terrible thing than it would have seemed to anyone else. At all events, when Strickland got her alone for a minute after lunch and asked her if she had the money ready for him, she had to tell him she had not. Perhaps she had not the time, or perhaps she did not wish to tell him why she had not. I imagine that the whole thing passed between them in this very room, and in the presence of some of you. A hurried exchange of whispers.

"What had happened, probably, is that Stall had been listening at the telephone extension, when Strickland rang her up on Thursday morning to say he would need the money. And Stall had heard her promise to have it ready for him. Or else Stall had seen the counterfoil in her check-book, and knew from it that she had just drawn the £200. Or he had chosen by chance this time for a last determined blackmail campaign, knowing that he was under notice to quit. At all events he had got wind of the money, and made it clear that he was to have it.

"Findin' that he was not to receive the sum, which he had intended to get doubled, Strickland went straight to the chauffeur, and told him his plan. At this point he showed a most horrifyin' sort of determination. He did not hesitate. He had his notions cut and dried and he was going to put them straight into action."

Here Lord Simon hesitated. Full of admiration I watched him light another cigar, before revealing to us what we were now burning to know. He had told us who was the murderer, but his identity was not, he thought, as mysterious as his method, and I wanted to say "Go on! Go on!" while the young man nonchalantly applied a match to his cigar. But he took his time, and when he began to talk again it was from a new angle.

"When you were thinking about the escape from that room, and you had an inklin' that there was a rope in it somewhere, did you wonder how that rope had been used?" He asked the question directly of me.

"Wonder? I've done nothing but wonder," I replied irritably. "Even supposing that the rope was let down from the floor above by an accomplice, I don't see how it could have been of much use. I've told you again and again that no one would have had time to climb out onto it, close the window after him, climb up it, and haul it up, before Williams opened the window again. And even if he had, he couldn't have reached us at the door as quickly as Strickland, Fellowes and Norris did."

"What about droppin' down it?" asked Lord Simon.

"The same thing applies. Suppose that there was someone upstairs to haul it in, the murderer would have had to climb out onto it, close the window, drop to the ground, and get away before Williams looked out, and the rope would have had to be hauled up after he had dropped from it. I don't think that those actions were possible. But even if they were, how was it the murderer left no footprints on that soft bed which came out six feet from the wall? And how did he get in again, and upstairs to us in the time? And how did his accomplice haul in the rope and come downstairs as quickly as that? No. I don't believe it's possible. In fact, I added on a sudden inspiration, "I'm not sure that the ropes were not a blind!"

Lord Simon smiled. "You are right about the first two things," he admitted; "there wouldn't have been time for anyone to have gone up or down the rope."

"Well, then?"

"It didn't occur to you perhaps that there are other directions in which it is possible to travel?"

"What do you mean?"

"He means," put in Mgr. Smith suddenly from his armchair, "that a rope is not only used to let a man climb, but also to make a man swing."

"Exactly," said Lord Simon; "swing is the word I want here and hereafter. Strickland knew that he might not have time to climb a rope, or drop down a rope, and establish that unimpeachable alibi which was necessary to him. But he would have time to swing on a rope, as comfortably as you please, from outside Mary Thurston's window to outside his own. All he had to do was to have a rope hung beforehand from the wall with the end of it caught and hooked at Mrs. Thurston's and his fire escape, or escape from justice if you like, was ready. An accomplice was only necessary to haul the rope in afterwards."

I gasped. Of course! Why hadn't I thought of that? And there were Williams and I talking about the supernatural!

"But Strickland was no fool," continued Lord Simon. "He was judge enough of character to know that Fellowes would not come in on that. For one thing, Fellowes would not have enough to gain by it. There was the will made out to the servants—out Strickland didn't feel that it would be enough inducement to a man to bring him into a murder plot. I think he was right there. Fellowes was not quite such a bad hat as all that. No, Strickland went about it far more cleverly. What he was going to do, he said, was to pinch Mrs. Thurston's jewelry."

"Now that, as you can see, was right in the chauffeur's line of country. He, or Enid's brother, knew just where to plant it afterwards. And Strickland's plan was ingenious. What they had to do, he said, was to make sure that no one inside the house could be suspected. The door must be left bolted and an escape made via the window. That was where Fellowes was to come in. It was at this point that Strickland pretended to think of a snag.

"Mrs. Thurston's jewelry was valuable, and a safe had been left into her bedroom wall for it, and only she and the doctor knew the combination. So Strickland did a bit of his deep thinkin' stuff. 'Tell you what,' he said, 'I'll stick a bally mask on, wear an old overcoat, and be waiting for her when she comes up to bed. I'll waggle a revolver in her face, and make her open the safe. Then, if you have the rope ready, I can escape by the window, and it will never occur to her that it was anyone in the house. And it won't occur to the police, either, when they come to investigate it. They'll think that anyone who gets out of the window, got in by the window, and if we make it clear to everyone that we were inside a few minutes before, and inside a few minutes after, she was held up, we're clear.'"

Most people who come out here are disillusioned when they see actors or actresses "off stage." The other night, a Shakespearean actress came into a restaurant and she acted so haughty and talked in such an affected voice that some of the people took a dislike to her. They couldn't understand why anybody would want to see her in a play. So I told 'em what a wonderful actress she was.

ning dinner guests with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lozier Sr. and son Harry.

Mr. and Mrs. Rodger Lozier were Tuesday guests at the Lozier home.

The Sports Carnival, held at the school building, for P.-T. A. benefit was a grand success. Although the attendance was not as large as expected, each person present received their share of prizes and fun.

The basketball game between the Pants and Skirts teams, alone was worth the price of admission. The Skirts team, dressed in ladies' clothes won by two points over the Pants team.

The line up for the Skirts was as follows: Captain John Farmer, Jr., Wendell Evans, Virgil Farmer, Harry Lozier, Edwin Dean, Roy Irvin. The Pants were: Captain, Charles Drake, Max Steele, Leslie Canupp, Willard Evans, Ward Dean.

It was a very fast game, in fact so fast some of the players would make baskets for the opposing team. The final score was Pants 18 and Skirts 20. Edwin Dean and Sam Athey refereed.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Tarbill delightfully entertained the members of their euchre club to a Washington's Birthday party Tuesday evening. The evening was passed in the game of euchre.

Refreshments, in keeping with the day were served to Mr. and Mrs. Joe Bush, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mills, Mr. and Mrs. John Farmer Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Willard Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Max Steele.

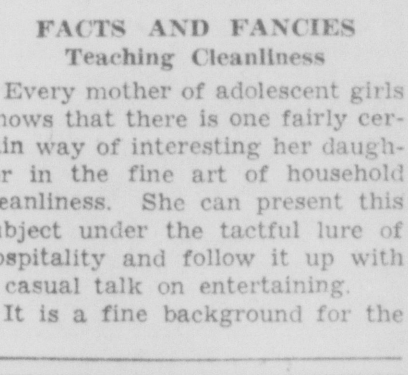

The scores resulted with high prize going to Mr. Bush, low to Mrs. Bush, and traveling to Mrs. Evans.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Wright and son Neal were business visitors in Columbus Friday, Miss Martha Ellen Wright of Oakley Hall, O. S. U. returned home with them to spend the week-end.

No Wonder You Are Constipated!

What do you eat for breakfast? Coffee, toast, maybe some eggs? What do you eat for lunch and dinner? Bread, meat, potatoes? No wonder you're constipated—due to lack of "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean the amount you eat. It means the kind of food that forms a soft, bulky mass in the bowels. It's this mass that helps your bowels move.

The common sense thing to do about it is to eat a natural laxative food, Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast will give you just the "bulk" you need. And it gives you, in addition, Nature's great intestinal-aid, vitamin B. Eat this crunchy toasted cereal every day, drink plenty of water, and life will be brighter for you! All-Bran is made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

PRICE SCHEDULE VARIES

Agricultural Agents To Aid In Marketing

H. E. Mantle, Painesville; C. E. Dutton, Milford Center; and Charles W. Hauck, Ohio State university, who recently attended a Washington conference as representatives of Ohio apple growers, say that the Surplus Commodities Corporation will continue the purchase of surplus apples until Spring.

The Ohio men, together with representatives from other states, recommended that 75 percent of the apples bought after March 1 should be U. S. No. 1 grade, with the balance to be a lower grade as recommended by committees in each state. The price to be paid for the apples will be determined by variety, grade, and size.

Prices for McIntosh, Spy, Delicious, Rhode Island Greening, Willow Twig, Staymen, Rome Beauty, Winesap, York Imperial, Baldwin and Cortland, probably will be 75 cents per bushel for No. 1 grade, 70 cents for apples two and one-fourth inches and larger; and 65 cents for apples from two and one-fourth to two and one-half inches in size. These same varieties in combination grade will bring 10 cents per bushel less in each size classification.

Another list of varieties, which includes Snow, Stark, Winter Banana, Champion, Ben Davis, Gano, Winkler, Senator, Ingram, and King David, will be bought for 10 cents per bushel less than is paid for the same grades and sizes of the varieties in the first group.

Members of a state committee, Mantle, Dutton, Frank Agnew, Youngstown; E. C. Cotton, Elyria; S. A. Plymale, Gallipolis; W. B. Baughman, New Concord, and F. H. Beach, Ohio State university, and county agricultural agents in the state will assist growers to market surplus apples.

FOOD CAPSULE BELIEVED KEY TO SUPERMAN

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—Food pills that may make possible the development of a race of "super men" were described here by Milton Silverman, director of the Science exhibit of the 1939 Golden Gate International Exposition.

"Preliminary experiments have started, and while it is too soon to make accurate predictions," he said, "it has led us to believe that the development of a 'laboratory man' is entirely within the realm of possibility."

Experiments have already been launched here with animals who are being fed chemically in capsule form.

Silverman pointed out: "Experiments so far with animals show that those fed chemically-constructed foods in tablet and capsule form are healthier and happier than those fed normally."

The time is not far distant, he said, when it will be possible to manufacture in tablet and capsule form most of the foods necessary for human existence.

In every tailored suit wardrobe, one mannish shirt is essential. It is very attractive in soft pastel acetate, with tucked bosom detail.

Team Minute Too Late
As we said Saturday, our basketball boys had a lot of winning stuff coked up in case they had to use it, but were just about one minute too slow in removing the cork. We have two teams of fine youngsters and we are proud of them. They did their best and did not do so badly in the number of trophies won. A 29 to 31 score game is a tough one to lose, but we're all good sports and can take it. Congratulations Pickaway.

Much Spring Plowing Already Done In Pickaway

Unless the weatherman pulls some unexpected antic out of his bag of tricks within the next three weeks, Pickaway county farmers are headed for a bumper wheat crop.

Farmers from various parts of the county report that wheat is in splendid condition at the present time. They contend that some "out of the ordinary" weather would be needed to cause heavy damage.

Certain conditions would be necessary to cause this damage, one observer pointed out. "We would need a sudden drop to about zero, with the wheat unprotected to cause damage," he said.

Mild Winter weather has given the wheat a fine growth, but it has also made it "tender." Extreme temperatures with considerable moisture in the ground causes "heaving" and damage to the plant roots.

Until the recent wet weather, many farmers were plowing to "get the jump" on Spring work. In recent years considerable Winter plowing has been done. Many

RICHARDS' NEW FARM EQUIPMENT BUILDING IN USE

The new building of Elmon E. Richards, Allis-Chalmers dealer, at 325 E. Main street, has been completed and is already in use as a sales and service room and tractor storage. The 75-foot by 40-foot structure is situated in the rear of the present office and parts room and has afforded Mr. Richards the space in which to establish one of the most up-to-date tractor repair shops in this community.

Mr. Richards established his Allis-Chalmers agency in Circleville last December and features the entire line of Allis-Chalmers farm machinery and the all-crop harvester. Complete stocks of parts and accessories are handled by the firm, which features service work on all makes of tractors, including Caterpillar and Cletrac crawler types.

The Allis-Chalmers company is now sponsoring the Renfro Barn Dance radio program heard every Saturday evening from 7 until 7:30 on station WLW.

TEXAS WINNER OF PIKE'S PEAK ON STATE BET

AUSTIN, Tex. (UP)—When Gov. James V. Allred of Texas "bet" Gov. Teller Ammons of Colorado the Big Bend Park on the Rio Grande against Pike's Peak that Rice Institute would beat Colorado in the Cotton Bowl football game, he piled up a lot of work for his secretaries.

Letters have poured into his office seeking the job of moving the peak since Rice Owls won the game.

Twenty-six residents of Alpin, Tex., signed a petition asking that the peak be placed in the Chisos Mountains where it would find proper "playmates" in the peaks of that area.

Others suggested that the job surely would relieve unemployment.

One wrote seriously, outlining a somewhat complicated plan for transferring the mountain from Colorado to Texas.

Gov. Ammons pointed out that he did not include delivery in the transfer. "Whenever you want it, just come and get it," he told the Texas governor as the game closed.

A less difficult way to unite the two states was proposed several years ago. A tunnel to divert the Colorado river so it would flow into the Rio Grande and empty into the Gulf of Mexico was suggested.

WOODEN COINS EAGERLY TAKEN BY COLLECTOR

RIPON, Wis. (UP)—Math J. Laudof took some wooden nickels, but it was only to gratify an obsession for collecting oddities that has made his Peebles farm home a virtual museum.

He has gathered 3,000 books, specializing in state and federal publications, but never reads them. Row upon row of whisky bottles from different parts of the world line the upper hallway of his home, but the master of the place "does not drink a drop" of intoxicating liquor.

"I just collect the junk for the fun of it," Laudof explains.

He is in his middle 40s, but so far hasn't "collected" a wife because, he says, he hasn't "had time."

You Get Greater Power AT THE DRAWBAR with A ROW CROP

State-supervised tests prove that the Oliver Row Crop Tractor delivers 24.40 drawbar horse power and 29.72 belt horse power. It actually delivers 82% of its belt horse power as pulling power at the drawbar.

If you are looking for outstanding fuel economy—for long life—ease of operation—and the finest line of mounted equipment in the world, let us tell you more about the Oliver Row Crop Tractor. The valve-in-head motor is force-feed lubricated at all points of high speed and heavy duty and is evenly cooled from top to bottom. It turns fuel into power as efficiently as the famous Tip-Toe drive wheels turn power into traction. If you are in the market for a tractor, you are going to want this one. See us today!

U. S. CONTINUES TO PURCHASE FINER APPLES

Surplus-Buying Is Directed By Committee of Seven In Ohio

PRICE SCHEDULE VARIES

Agricultural Agents To Aid In Marketing

H. E. Mantle, Painesville; C. E. Dutton, Milford Center; and Charles W. Hauck, Ohio State University, who recently attended a Washington conference as representatives of Ohio apple growers, say that the Surplus Commodities Corporation will continue the purchase of surplus apples until Spring.

The Ohio men, together with representatives from other states, recommended that 75 percent of the apples bought after March 1 should be U. S. No. 1 grade, with the balance to be a lower grade as recommended by committees in each state. The price to be paid for the apples will be determined by variety, grade, and size.

Prices for McIntosh, Spy, Delicious, Rhode Island Greening, Willow Twig, Staymen, Rome Beauty, Winesap, York Imperial, Baldwin and Cortland, probably will be 75 cents per bushel for No. 1 grade, two and one-half inches or larger; 70 cents for apples two and one-fourth inches and larger; and 65 cents for apples from two and one-fourth to two and one-half inches in size. These same varieties in combination grade will bring 10 cents per bushel less in each size classification.

Another list of varieties, which includes Snow, Stark, Winter Banana, Champion, Ben Davis, Gano, Winkler, Senator, Ingram, and King David, will be bought for 10 cents per bushel less than is paid for the same grades and sizes of the varieties in the first group.

Members of a state committee, Mantle, Dutton, Frank Agnew, Youngstown; E. C. Cotton, Elyria; S. A. Plymale, Gallipolis; W. B. Baughman, New Concord, and F. H. Beach, Ohio State University, and county agricultural agents in the state will assist growers to market surplus apples.

FOOD CAPSULE BELIEVED KEY TO SUPERMAN

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—Food pills that may make possible the development of a race of "super men" were described here by Milton Silverman, director of the Science exhibit of the 1939 Golden Gate International Exposition.

"Preliminary experiments have started, and while it is too soon to make accurate predictions," he said, "it has led us to believe that the development of a 'laboratory man' is entirely within the realm of possibility."

Experiments have already been launched here with animals who are being fed chemically in capsule form.

Silverman pointed out: "Experiments so far with animals show that those fed chemically-constructed foods in tablet and capsule form are healthier and happier than those fed normally."

The time is not far distant, he said, when it will be possible to manufacture in tablet and capsule form most of the foods necessary for human existence.

In every tailored suit wardrobe, one mannish shirt is essential. It is very attractive in soft pastel acetate, with tucked bosom detail.

As we said Saturday, our basketball boys had a lot of winning stuff coked up in case they had to use it, but were just about one minute too slow in removing the cork. We have two teams of fine youngsters and we are proud of them. They did their best and did not do so badly in the number of trophies won. A 29 to 31 score game is a tough one to lose, but we're all good sports and can take it. Congratulations Pickaway.

ARM PROGRAM OR 1938 AIDS CORN GROWERS

State A.A.A. Chairman Says
Price Stabilization To Help Ohioans

PROVISIONS DISCUSSED

Tentative Figures On Year's Consumption Provided

Ohio farmers in the commercial corn producing area, which includes 54 counties, will have great opportunity to supply and price stabilization and better balanced turning under the provisions of the 1938 AAA Farm Program, according to E. F. Kruse, state chairman.

Mr. Kruse says that the new Act extends the agricultural conservation programs of the past two years, and that it also provides new methods for lessening the fluctuations in corn marketings and livestock production. He summarizes the features of the new program as they apply to corn as follows:

The conservation program should serve to stabilize corn acreage. Farmers will participate in it as they have in the programs of 1936 and 1937. They will receive payments for planting a reasonable acreage of corn and for better farming practices. Loans will be offered to farmers for corn placed under seal when prices and supplies are at certain levels.

Provisions Listed

Provisions for marketing quotas in the commercial corn area are included in the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938. These quotas should stabilize corn supplies. It is estimated that the corn supply as of October 1 will exceed the quota level, producers will vote in the adoption of quotas. Then, if two-thirds of those who voted favor the quotas, they would be put into effect for the marketing year beginning October 1.

The tentative figure for a normal year's domestic consumption and exports is a little more than 2.3 billion bushels. Normal supply, defined in the new Act as 7 percent above that amount, would be approximately 2.5 billion bushels. If the actual supply available for market and livestock feed exceeds this normal supply by 10 percent, which would be approximately 2.8 billion bushels, a vote will be held on quotas.

The total quantity of corn in the quotas—the quantity of corn which may be marketed without any penalty—will be a quantity which, when added to the carry-over would make a normal supply available.

Mr. Kruse states that under the conservation phase of the program, acreage allotments are to be established for individual farms. On the basis of the 10-year acreage yields, these would make a reserve supply level of corn available. This supply would be equal to the average domestic consumption and exports plus 10 percent, or a total of approximately 2.6 billion bushels. Farmers in the commercial corn area who do not exceed their corn acreage allotments will be able to qualify for corn payments under the adjustment and conservation provisions of the AAA program.

With normal yields, marketing percentages of farm acreage allot-

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

It was a happy choice that romantically teamed Joan Crawford and Spencer Tracy for the first time in "Mannequin," which opened yesterday at the Cliftona theatre.

Given a smartly-modern story by Katharine Brush, who wrote "Young Man of Manhattan," and able direction by Frank Borzage, the stars share honors with performances that must be numbered among their finest.

AT THE GRAND

"Varsity Show," a musical comedy along altogether new lines, and possessed of a sparkling cast, met with an enthusiastic reception at the Grand theatre yesterday when it was presented by Warner Bros. for its local premiere. A star individual—Dick Powell—and a star organization—Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians—are the top-liners in this melodious, laughable, fast-paced tale of college life as the movie-makers see it—and as, doubtless, all college boys and girls wish it were.

It is the tale of how the under-graduates of a little fresh-water educational institution try to put on a show under the supervision of a dignified and gloomy professor, only to realize that he's ruining it with his highbrow notions.

STRIDES TAKEN TRACTOR SALES BY LOCAL FIRM

What is believed to be a record in this community for the delivery of a carload of tractors was established recently by the Circleville Implement Co., 159 E. Franklin-st. On Saturday, February 19, this concern unloaded a car of Oliver 70 tractors and one week later the entire shipment was in the hands of various local farmers.

"We have made remarkable strides towards the leadership in tractor distribution in Pickaway county since our arrival here only two years ago," M. E. Hetzler, owner of the implement company, said Monday. "Since the first of the year we have delivered 16 Oliver tractors and the Spring business outlook is very good," he added.

On March 1 another carload of Oliver will be in Circleville, most of which are already sold, according to Mr. Hetzler.

ments would equal the normal supply of 2.5 billion bushels. If the marketing percentage were exceeded by the corn acreage on the farm, the producer would be required under the quota provisions to store part of his corn under seal.

An analysis of the cattle feeder's situation this Winter, with the prediction of a better income from his feeding operations for the Spring and Summer, featured a radio address given over station WHKC, Columbus, Saturday, by F. K. Blair, county extension agent.

Mr. Blair's address follows:

"Probably no enterprise on the farm has come in for more talk and discussion during the last three or four months than has the cattle feeding industry. Most of this talk among farmers and cattlemen has been brought about by the great drop in fat cattle prices during the late Fall and Winter months. Any enterprise, whether it is in the field of agriculture, business, or manufacturing, that drops 50 per cent in price in so short a length of time, is sure to come in for a lot of study and analysis. It is also sure to cause a lot of headaches, for those people that are engaged in that business. Cattle feeders that are crawling out from under the market crash, are now looking around to see what it was all about. Under normal conditions we expect some decline in cattle prices from September to February, but seldom do we see it take such a nose dive, as it did this fall. In fact, it is the biggest drop in cattle prices since the war. And you can just guess, that it caught a lot of people unprepared for such a drop. Even the old time cattle feeders admit that it caught them with heavy supplies of fat or near fat cattle on their hands. Most of these men will sustain heavy losses for the Fall and Winter marketing period. However, a few may break even, that had lighter weight cattle, because they have been able to put on gains so much more cheaply than they did last summer.

Molasses Expected

"At a recent cattle feeders meeting at Circleville, some of the men present said that they were able to put on gains at from 6 to 6½ cents per pound. This will help to pull them out of a bad situation. However, those that sold earlier, and those that now have to sell are in for a loss. I predict that a great many men that fed cattle the past Fall, and marketed them this winter, will not be in the business next year. One big loss is all they can stand. But the fellow that feeds cattle year in and year out, will be back in the business looking for a chance to make up for what he lost. There is an old axiom you know, that directs you to go look for a thing where you lost it. And that is about what these men will do. They will stick to the business until they regain their losses.

"Now what will this dropping out of the cattle feeding business by some of the men who lost so heavily mean to prices next Fall and Winter? Well, in all probability it is going to mean less cattle on feed, and consequently, higher price. And that's about the picture that the Bureau of Agriculture Economics gives us at the present. Only they don't say anything about prices. Their estimates indicate that there will be less total cattle marketed in 1938 than in 1937; but that the cattle which are marketed will be carrying more weight and quality than last years cattle. This may make about the same amount of beef for market that we had in 1937. If dairy cow prices continue as high as they are now, we can expect less cows and heifers for slaughter than during 1937. Dairy heifers will be held back for breeding purposes, and cows will be maintained for milk production. This should decrease the amount of low quality beef coming to market during the next twelve months, which should help the cattle feeder some.

"Another thing—which may be a good indication of better future prices for fat cattle, is the present relative high price of feeders. They are selling considerable out of proportion to finished cattle. Good feeder calves are around 8½ to 9 cents per pound put into the food lot. This will tend to discourage the more timid feeder. But to the man who feeds cattle regularly, it doesn't seem so high as 10 and 11 cent feeders last Fall. Another indication of less cattle for market is the 65 per cent calf crop that is reported from the range country. All of these factors should have some bearing on the market next Fall and Winter.

Not Shortighted

"I have said a great deal about the plight of cattle men this Winter, which might lead you to believe that they had bad judgment in buying cattle last Fall and Summer for marketing this Winter. Well that isn't the case at all. Cattle feeders cannot be called short-sighted for buying cattle last Fall. At that time it looked like we might have some drop in prices, but there was nothing to indicate that prices would drop so far, or so rapidly as they did. There was no over supply of cattle on feed at any time, so, under normal conditions, the price would have taken only the seasonal decline. What actually happened though, was a sudden business slump or recession, with thousands of people being turned out of work, and a consequent decline in the consumption of meat. All of this coupled up with the fact that retail prices of meat did not decline in proportion to cattle prices; and to wage earnings; caused a sudden pile up of meat supplies. Retail prices have gradually gone down to where consumption is going up, and as a consequence prices of prime fat cattle have increased about a cent a pound during the past ten days. If business conditions improve during the spring months, and if retail prices hold steady, we can safely predict better prices for finished cattle this Spring and Summer. With better prices, and lower feed costs, the man who lost everything but his courage during the Winter, will be in a position to make some money on his feeding operations during 1938.

"Just as I was leaving my office for the studio I received a copy of the summary of the cattle situation for the month of February as published by the Bureau of Agriculture Economics, of the United States Department of Agriculture. Here is what they have to say about the present situation. "A 15 per cent increase in the number of cattle on feed in the Corn Belt States, January 1, this year compared with last, suggests a marked increase in the supply of well-finished, grain-fed cattle in Spring and Summer.

Average Weight Up

"For the full year, total slaughter of cattle and calves is expected to be smaller than in 1937, but much of this reduction will be offset by heavier average weight of cattle slaughtered. The supply of beef will be nearly as large as in 1937, but a larger proportion of it will be of better grade.

"Prices of slaughter cows and of the lower grade of steers usually advance seasonally from January through May. The supply of these cattle will be much less this year than last, but an offset in price will be the weak consumer demand for all meats.

"In early January choice and prime grade slaughter steers at Chicago were selling for nearly $8 less than in late October and about $2.50 less than a year earlier. But prices of good grade slaughter cows were about the same as a year earlier.

"Among the factors responsible for the sharp decline in prices of the better grades of cattle from October through December were a slight increase in the supply of such cattle, a decrease in consumer demand for meats, a seasonal increase in poultry supplies, a more-than-seasonal increase in slaughter supplies of hogs, and a sharp decline in hide prices." All of which more or less bears out just what we have been saying about feeding conditions.

"At the February meeting of Pickaway County Cattle Feeders'

held recently in Circleville, L. P. McCann, extension specialist in beef production at Ohio State university, gave the men some sound advice about the cattle feeding business. He said that cattle feeding isn't a guessing game. He stated that it is an industry that requires careful planning, and a strong determination to carry out that plan. All too often, according to Mr. McCann, the feeder that has no plan is in the business when he should be out, and out of the business when he should be in. Second, he said that if a man had a lot of money tied up in buildings, feeding equipment and supplies, he had better feed cattle all of the time rather than to let this investment stand idle. An idle plant pays no dividends. And third he said, "Don't speculate on fat cattle prices, of high quality after December first of any year." And last he told the men that only those who loved to feed cattle should be in the business. He said they stood a much better chance of succeeding than the man who hasn't any great love for his business.

O. S. U. CROP SPECIALIST TO DELIVER TWO TALKS

Prof. D. R. Dodd, crop specialist of Ohio State university, will be the speaker at two meetings scheduled in the county on Wednesday at the Perry and Saltcreek township schools.

He will speak on the development of pastures, including clover mixtures, rate of seeding, time for seeding, liming and crop rotations. The meeting at New Holland will be held at 1 p. m., the Saltcreek meeting at 8 p. m. All interested farmers are invited to attend the meetings.

FARM PROGRAM FOR 1938 AIDS CORN GROWERS

State A.A.A. Chairman Says Price Stabilization To Help Ohioans

PROVISIONS DISCUSSED

Representative Figures On Year's Consumption Provided

Ohio farmers in the commercial corn producing area, which includes 54 counties, will have greater opportunity for supply and price stabilization and better balanced farming under the provisions of the 1938 AAA Farm Program, according to E. F. Kruse, state chairman.

Mr. Kruse says that the new Act extends the agricultural conservation programs of the past two years, and that it also provides new methods for lessening the fluctuations in corn marketings and livestock production. He summarizes the features of the new program as they apply to corn as follows:

The conservation program should serve to stabilize corn acreage. Farmers will participate in it as they have in the programs of 1936 and 1937. They will receive payments for planting a reasonable acreage of corn and for better farming practices. Loans will be offered to farmers for corn placed under seal when prices and supplies are at certain levels.

Provisions Listed

Provisions for marketing quotas in the commercial corn area are included in the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938. These quotas should stabilize corn supplies. If it is estimated that the corn supply as of October 1 will exceed the quota level, producers will vote on the adoption of quotas. Then, if two-thirds of those who voted favor the quotas, they would be put into effect for the marketing year beginning October 1.

The tentative figure for a normal year's domestic consumption and exports is a little more than 2.5 billion bushels. Normal supply, defined in the new Act as 7 percent above that amount, would be approximately 2.5 billion bushels. If the actual supply available for market and livestock feed exceeds this normal supply by 10 percent, which would be approximately 2.8 billion bushels, a vote will be held on quotas.

The total quantity of corn in the quotas—the quantity of corn which may be marketed without any penalty—will be a quantity which, when added to the carry-over would make a normal supply available.

Mr. Kruse states that under the conservation phase of the program, acreage allotments are to be established for individual farms. On the basis of the 10-year average yields, these would make a reserve supply level of corn available. This supply would be equal to the average domestic consumption and exports plus 10 percent, or a total of approximately 2.6 billion bushels. Farmers in the commercial corn area who do not exceed their corn acreage allotments will be able to qualify for corn payments under the adjustment and conservation provisions of the AAA program.

With normal yields, marketing percentages of farm acreage allot-

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

It was a happy choice that romantically teamed Joan Crawford and Spencer Tracy for the first time in "Mannequin," which opened yesterday at the Cliftona theatre.

Given a smartly-modern story by Katharine Brush, who wrote "Young Man of Manhattan," and able direction by Frank Borzage, the stars share honors with performances that must be numbered among their finest.

AT THE GRAND

"Varsity Show," a musical comedy along altogether new lines, and possessed of a sparkling cast, met with an enthusiastic reception at the Grand theatre yesterday when it was presented by Warner Bros. for its local premiere. A star individual—Dick Powell—and a star organization—Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians—are the top-liners in this melodious, laughable, fast-paced tale of college life as the movie-makers see it—and, doubtless, all college boys and girls wish it were.

It is the tale of how the under-graduates of a little fresh-water educational institution try to put on a show under the supervision of a dignified and gloomy professor, only to realize that he's ruining it with his highbrow notions.

STRIDES TAKEN TRACTOR SALES BY LOCAL FIRM

What is believed to be a record in this community for the delivery of a carload of tractors was established recently by the Circleville Implement Co., 159 E. Franklin-st. On Saturday, February 19, this concern unloaded a car of Oliver 70 tractors and one week later the entire shipment was in the hands of various local farmers.

"We have made remarkable strides towards the leadership in tractor distribution in Pickaway county since our arrival here only two years ago," M. E. Hetzler, owner of the implement company, said Monday. "Since the first of the year we have delivered 16 Oliver tractors and the Spring business outlook is very good," he added.

On March 1 another carload of Oliver will be in Circleville, most of which are already sold, according to Mr. Hetzler.

ments would equal the normal supply of 2.5 billion bushels. If the marketing percentage were exceeded by the corn acreage on the farm, the producer would be required under the quota provisions to store part of his corn under seal.

An analysis of the cattle feeder's situation this Winter, with the prediction of a better income from his feeding operations for the Spring and Summer, featured a radio address given over station WHKC, Columbus, Saturday, by F. K. Blair, county extension agent.

Mr. Blair's address follows: "Probably no enterprise on the farm has come in for more talk and discussion during the last three or four months than has the cattle feeding industry. Most of this talk among farmers and cattlemen has been brought about by the great drop in fat cattle prices during the late Fall and Winter months. Any enterprise, whether it is in the field of agriculture, business, or manufacturing, that drops 50 per cent in price in so short a length of time, is sure to come in for a lot of study and analysis. It is also sure to cause a lot of headaches for those people that are engaged in that business. Cattle feeders that are crawling out from under the market crash, are now looking around to see what it was all about. Under normal conditions we expect some decline in cattle prices from September to February, but seldom do we see it take such a nose dive as we did this fall. In fact, it is the biggest drop in cattle prices since the war. And you can just guess, that it caught a lot of people unprepared for such a drop. Even the old time cattle feeders admit that it caught them with heavy supplies of fat or near fat cattle on their hands. Most of these men will sustain heavy losses for the Fall and Winter marketing period. However, a few may break even, that had lighter weight cattle, because they have been able to put on gains so much more cheaply than they did last summer.

Molasses Expected

"At a recent cattle feeders meeting at Circleville, some of the men present said that they were able to put on gains at from 6 to 6½ cents per pound. This will help to pull them out of a bad situation. However, those that sold earlier, and those that now have to sell are in for a loss. I predict that a great many men that fed cattle the past Fall, and marketed them this winter, will not be in the business next year. One big loss is all they can stand. But the fellow that feeds cattle year in and year out, will be back in the business looking for a chance to make up for what he lost. There is an old axiom you know, that directs you to go look for a thing where you lost it. And that is about what these men will do. They will stick to the business until they regain their losses.

"Now what will this dropping out of the cattle feeding business by some of the men who lost so heavily mean to prices next Fall and Winter? Well, in all probability it is going to mean less cattle on feed, and consequently, higher price. And that's about the picture that the Bureau of Agriculture Economics gives us at the present. Only they don't say anything about prices. Their estimates indicate that there will be less total cattle marketed in 1938 than in 1937; but that the cattle which are marketed will be carrying more weight and quality than last year's cattle. This may make about the same amount of beef for market that we had in 1937. If dairy cow prices continue as high as they are now, we can expect less cows and heifers for slaughter than during 1937. Dairy heifers will be held back for breeding purposes, and cows will be maintained for milk production. This should decrease the amount of low quality beef coming to market during the next twelve months, which should help the cattle feeder some.

"Another thing which may be a good indication of better future prices for fat cattle, is the present relative high price of feeders. They are selling considerable out of proportion to finished cattle. Good feeder calves are around 8½ to 9 cents per pound put into the food lot. This will tend to discourage the more timid feeder. But to the man who feeds cattle regularly, it doesn't seem so high as 10 and 11 cent feeders last Fall. Another indication of less cattle for market is the 65 per cent calf crop that is reported from the range country. All of these factors should have some bearing on the market next Fall and Winter.

Not Shortighted

"I have had a great deal about the plight of cattle men this Winter, which might lead you to believe that they had bad judgment in buying cattle last Fall and Summer for marketing this Winter. Well that isn't the case at all. Cattle feeders cannot be called shortsighted for buying cattle last Fall. At that time it looked like we might have some drop in prices, but there was nothing to indicate that prices would drop so far, or so rapidly as they did. There was no over supply of cattle on feed at any time, so, under normal conditions, the price would have taken only the seasonal decline. What actually happened though, was a sudden business slump or recession, with thousands of people being turned out of work, and a consequent decline in the consumption of meat. All of this coupled up with the fact that retail prices of meat did not decline in proportion to cattle prices; and to wage earnings; caused a sudden pile up of meat supplies. Retail prices have gradually gone down to where consumption is going up, and as a consequence prices of prime fat cattle have increased about a cent a pound during the past ten days. If business conditions improve during the spring months, and if retail prices hold steady, we can safely predict better prices for finished cattle this Spring and Summer. With better prices, and lower feed costs, the man who lost everything but his courage during the Winter, will be in a position to make some money on his feeding operations during 1938.

"Just as I was leaving my office for the studio I received a copy of the summary of the cattle situation for the month of February as published by the Bureau of Agriculture Economics, of the United States Department of Agriculture. Here is what they have to say about the present situation. "A 15 per cent increase in the number of cattle on feed in the Corn Belt States, January 1, this year compared with last, suggests a marked increase in the supply of well-finished, grain-fed cattle in Spring and Summer.

Average Weight Up

"For the full year, total slaughter of cattle and calves is expected to be smaller than in 1937, but much of this reduction will be offset by heavier average weight of cattle slaughtered. The supply of beef will be nearly as large as in 1937, but a larger proportion of it will be of better grade.

"Prices of slaughter cows and of the lower grade of steers usually advance seasonally from January through May. The supply of these cattle will be much less this year than last, but an offset in price will be the weak consumer demand for all meats.

"In early January choice and prime grade slaughter steers at Chicago were selling for nearly $8 less than in late October and about $2.50 less than a year earlier. But prices of good grade slaughter cows were about the same as a year earlier.

"Among the factors responsible for the sharp decline in prices of the better grades of cattle from October through December were a slight increase in the supply of such cattle, a decrease in consumer demand for meats, a seasonal increase in poultry supplies, a more-than-seasonal increase in slaughter supplies of hogs, and a sharp decline in hide prices." All of which more or less bears out just what we have been saying about feeding conditions.

"At the February meeting of Pickaway County Cattle Feeders'

held recently in Circleville, L. P. McCann, extension specialist in beef production at Ohio State university, gave the men some sound advice about the cattle feeding business. He said that cattle feeding isn't a guessing game. He stated that it is an industry that requires careful planning, and a strong determination to carry out that plan. Second, he said that if a man had a lot of money tied up in buildings, feeding equipment and supplies, he had better feed cattle all of the time rather than to let this investment stand idle. An idle plant pays no dividends. And third he said, "Don't speculate an fat cattle prices, of high quality after December first of any year." And last he told the men that only those who loved to feed cattle should be in the business. He said they stood a much better chance of succeeding than the man who hasn't any great love for his business.

About This And That In Many Sports

Coaches, Officials Name All-Stars

The matter of selecting an all-tournament boys' team was placed in the hands of county coaches, tournament officials and referees Saturday by The Daily Herald and from the tally of votes comes a squad of eight athletes that any coach in Ohio would be proud to have performing under his colors.

Each coach, the official scorer and timer and the referees were asked to record the names of five athletes whom they thought deserved places on the all-tournament team. The experiment proved interesting and resulted in, what this column believes, a fair representation. No attempt is made to list a first five out of the selections, so you may take your choice. Here they are:

FORWARDS

Creighton Anderson, Pickaway, a unanimous choice.

Junior Gregg, Ashville, selected by all but two.

Warren Speakman, New Holland, voted one of the best floor-men in the tournament.

CENTERS

George Wilson, Pickaway, and Earl Wilson, Scioto, each of whom received votes of four persons, more than any other choices.

GUARDS

Gene Ebert, New Holland, chosen by seven for guard and three for center; Wimpy Walden, Ashville, and Ralph Dunkle, Pickaway, each receiving ballots of five persons.

Honorable mention, going to all named by the coaches, etc., in addition to those in the varsity eight, included Mossbarger, New Holland, mentioned as a center and forward; Jay Warner, Pickaway, given three votes for guard although he played forward; Barney Rosse, Ashville, guard; Jim Boggs, Pickaway, guard; Mallory, Ashville, center, suggested for a guard place; Kenny Rodgers, Scioto, guard; Ernest Ankrom, Muhlenberg, forward * * *

As just a second guess, here's this column's choice for the first five Gregg and Speakman, forwards; Anderson, center; Walden and Ebert, guards * * *

PURDUE'S YOUNG SETS PACE FOR BIG TEN CAGERS

CHICAGO, Feb. 28 — (UP) — Jewell Young, Purdue's two-headed marksman, shot the bolliermakers into an undisputed lead in the Big Ten basketball campaign Saturday and another whirlwind performance against Chicago tonight may clinch his second straight conference scoring championship.

The slender Purdue southpaw leaped into first place in individual scoring by rolling up 59 points in three games after trailing Pick Denner of Illinois since the first night of the season.

His latest spurge, 19 points against Indiana, also broke a first place tie in the team standings and moved Purdue ahead of Northwestern for the first time this season.

Purdue meets Chicago tonight, Northwestern plays at Ohio State, Minnesota travels to Iowa, Indiana meets Wisconsin at Madison and Michigan plays at Illinois.

FRANKIE FRISCH HURT

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 28 — (UP) — Frankie Frisch, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, was carrying his right ankle around in a plaster cast today. He fractured two small bones last week at the Cards' Winter Haven, Fla., baseball school. X-rays last night disclosed them.

CARNERA RECOVERS

PADUA, Italy, Feb. 28 — (UP) — Former Heavyweight Champion Primo Carnera, completely recovered from a recent kidney operation, returned to his home in Sequals today.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 28 — (UP) —

With a first division berth as its aim, Ohio State re-enters the Big Ten basketball battle here tonight when it engages Northwestern.

Ohio State currently has a record of five victories and an equal number of defeats to be in a tie for fifth place with Michigan. A victory tonight is essential if the Bucks hope to finish in the top half of the standing.

Northwestern holds down second place in the race, one-half game to the rear of the pace-set-

Burger's Cagers Gain 31-29 Edge

Early Pirate Advantage Proves Sufficient To Stand Off Late Rally by Opponents

Another Pickaway county basketball tournament was history today with Pickaway township boys and Ashville girls carrying major honors by winning Saturday night's games from Ashville boy and New Holland girls, respectively. The New Holland boys' team won the third and consolation position from Darby township's varsity.

Pickaway, Ashville and New Holland will represent the county in the Central district class B tournament opening at Westerville next week-end.

The Pickaway boys, defending champions, gained a 31-29 victory over Ashville in one of the hottest-contested basketball games seen in a tournament in recent years. A torrid second period when the Pirates scored 13 points against six for their opponents proved the margin of victory because from that time on the game was just a question of whether Pickaway could maintain its small lead.

The Pirates, coached by Carl Burger, hopped out in front in the first period by a 5-4 score. They turned on the heat in the second session to hit the hoop for four buckets and five free throws, while Ashville was able to add two buckets by Junior Gregg and one, a pretty hook shot from the side, by Wimpy Walden.

Lead Reduced

Al Kauber's Ashville youths started to cut down Pickaway's advantage after the intermission, holding the defending champions to four points in the third period while adding eight to their own total. As the last period started Pickaway held an edge of four points, 22-18.

The battle raged from start to finish of this night Ashville threatening every minute to overcome

Early Pirate Advantage Proves Sufficient To Stand Off Late Rally by Opponents

Another Pickaway county basketball tournament was history today with Pickaway township boys and Ashville girls carrying off major honors by winning Saturday night's games from Ashville boys and New Holland girls, respectively. The New Holland boys' team won the third and consolation position from Darby township's varsity.

Pickaway, Ashville and New Holland will represent the count in the Central district class B tournament opening at Westerville next week-end.

The Pickaway boys, defending champions, gained a 31-29 victory over Ashville in one of the hottest-contested basketball games seen in a tournament in recent years. A torrid second period when the Pirates scored 13 points against six for their opponents proved the margin of victory because from that time on the game was just a question of whether Pickaway could maintain its small lead.

The Pirates, coached by Carl Burger, hopped out in front in the first period by a 5-4 score. They turned on the heat in the second session to hit the hoop for four buckets and five free throws, while Ashville was able to add two buckets by Junior Gregg and one, a pretty hook shot from the side, by Wimpy Walden.

Lead Reduced

Al Kauber's Ashville youths started to cut down Pickaway's advantage after the intermission, holding the defending champions to four points in the third period while adding eight to their own total. As the last period started Pickaway held an edge of four points, 22-18.

The battle raged from start to finish of this period Ashville threatening every minute to overcome the margin the Pirate quintet had piled up, but it was not to happen. With seconds skipping past Ashville had several shots at the hoop with the score standing at 31-21 but the ball refused to drop in the final gong sounding with Ashville having possession of the ball out of bounds under the Pickaway basket.

The defense built up to stop Creighton Anderson, Pickaway scoring ace proved very effective, throwing the burden of the scoring on the other Pickaway lad, Wimpy Walden, who played in front of Anderson under the Pickaway bucket, preventing the ball from getting to him, deserve credit for a sweet bit of defensive work. With Anderson held to thine of seven points, a low figure for him, it was necessary for Ja Warner, George Wilson and the members of the Pickaway brigade to go to work. Ralph Dunkle added five points from his defensive post to add much to Pickaway's chances. Two of his double deckers came in the last half while Warner, who was high point man for the winners, added on toss and Wilson caged two in the final period.

Foul Tossing Faulty

Failure to connect consistently from the foul line hurt Ashville's chances, only seven out of 11 tosses falling through the hoop. Dependable Junior Gregg, who tallied 10 points to top all the game's scorers, missed his first six attempts from the free throw line. He dropped his last two however, to pull his team within two points of a tie game.

Ashville girls had too many guns for the New Holland lassies the gong finding the Harrison township girls ahead 27 to 10. The victory avenged a defeat handed out by New Holland during the regular season, the only blemish on the Ashville record.

A knee injury that kept Miss Mace, tall forward, out of the game part of the time and slowed her down while she was on the court, hurt the New Holland chances. The courageous athlete tried hard to play her usual good game, but it was impossible for her to get around the court.

Ashville, paced by Spindler Young and Kuhlwein, took a 5-lead at the first period, boosted to 14-6 at the half, and held it 19-6 at the three-quarter goal. Spindler topped the scorers with 10, four action tosses and two from the charity stripe. White with Mace out of action, proved to be New Holland's only threat. Ebert starred on the defense for the losers and Six was outstanding for the winners.

Bulldogs in Form

New Holland boys played in championship style to turn back Darby township, 39-23. Hicks Darby center, was not in uniform because of a knee injury.

New Holland wasted no time getting into action, grabbing a 12-7 advantage when the first period gong sounded. The first half total was 22-15, and the third quarter 28-16.

Ebert, Speakman and Davis did most of New Holland's scoring.

The tournament, managed by M. T. Johnson, superintendent of the Pickaway township school, was a success in every respect. Large crowds attended all sessions.

Trophies were awarded after the final game to the winning teams, runners-up and winners of the league schedule. Ashville girls Ralph Whitehead, Pickaway and Russ Ruoff finished in a tie for the league go-falon. The league trophies were given by the athletic association and The Daily Herald.

Another Pickaway county basketball tournament was history today with Pickaway township boys and Ashville girls carrying off major honors by winning Saturday night's games from Ashville boys and New Holland girls, respectively. The New Holland boys' team won the third and consolation position from Darby township's varsity.

Pickaway, Ashville and New Holland will represent the count in the Central district class B tournament opening at Westerville next week-end.

The Pickaway boys, defending champions, gained a 31-29 victory over Ashville in one of the hottest-contested basketball games seen in a tournament in recent years. A torrid second period when the Pirates scored 13 points against six for their opponents proved the margin of victory because from that time on the game was just a question of whether Pickaway could maintain its small lead.

The Pirates, coached by Carl Burger, hopped out in front in the first period by a 5-4 score. They turned on the heat in the second session to hit the hoop for four buckets and five free throws, while Ashville was able to add two buckets by Junior Gregg and one, a pretty hook shot from the side, by Wimpy Walden.

Lead Reduced

Al Kauber's Ashville youths started to cut down Pickaway's advantage after the intermission, holding the defending champions to four points in the third period while adding eight to their own total. As the last period started Pickaway held an edge of four points, 22-18.

the heart A, leaving the heart R a winner. With two diamonds off the hand and a trump, the question was how to avoid another loser. His next move was to give up a trick to East's heart K, whereupon the opponents cashed two diamonds. East then switched to the spade Q and declarer went in with the A. The diamonds J and 9 were now played, on which two spades were tossed from dummy. A spade was now ruffed with dummy's last trump and on the clubs A and K, two spades were discarded. A club was now ruffed and the remaining good spade cashed.

THOMAS J. BURGETT AND RUSSELL IMLER APPOINTED TO ELECTION BOARD

MEN TO RETAIN COUNTY OFFICES FOR FOUR YEARS

Secretary of State Abides By Recommendation Of Committees

BOTH ARE SERVING NOW

Changes Made in Fairfield, Fayette Units

Reappointment of two members of the Pickaway county board of elections was announced Monday by William J. Kennedy, secretary of state.

Those named were Thomas J. Burgett, of Orient, Republican, and Russell Imler, E. Mound street, Democrat. Both received the endorsement of their respective committees. Mr. Burgett has been chairman of the board. Their present terms expire Tuesday. Under the new appointments they will serve until Feb. 28, 1942.

Terms of only two board members expire this year. Other members of the board are Orin W. Dreisbach, Republican, Circleville township, and James Tootle, Democrat, of Monroe township.

The list of appointments included two new members on the boards of Fairfield and Fayette counties. H. H. Wolfinger, Democrat, of Lancaster, was named on the Fairfield board. C. M. Raab, Republican of Canal Winchester, was reappointed.

Thurman Sholey, Democrat, of Bloomingburg, Route 1, was named on the Fayette county board. Glenn B. Rodgers, Republican of Washington C. H., is the new member.

Proposed National Super-Highway System

HERE are suggested North-South and East-West super-highways, which would be constructed by the federal government at a cost of eight billion dollars, to be paid for eventually through tolls and leases to highway rights. According to the plan, there would be three transcontinental highways and six North-South routes. Author of the plan is T. E. Steiner, Wooster, Ohio, industrialist. Senator Robert J. Bulkley of Ohio took it up, and now the administration supports such a proposal.

Use of Home Products Urged by Farmerette

Ohio homemakers who buy corn for $2.80 per bushel and wheat at the rate of $15 per bushel in the form of breakfast cereals have not investigated thoroughly the advantages of using home products, according to Mrs. George Folkerth, Greenville.

Mrs. Folkerth says a supply of corn dried soon after harvest and a peck of wheat cleaned thoroughly in the fall while the seed wheat is prepared for planting will furnish materials for many tasty dishes. The wheat can be washed and dried thoroughly to prepare it for home use.

Part of the corn can be ground into meal and another portion reserved to be hulled with lye for hominy. The hominy can be canned and held for use at any time. Mrs. Folkerth recommends cracking some of the wheat in a food grinder or coffee mill and canning the rest.

Her method of canning wheat is to soak the grains for 24 hours in water and then process it in a pressure cooker for four hours or until the grains begin to burst. She advises women who try this method for the first time that five pints of dry grain will make 10 cans of cooked wheat and that cans should be filled only three-fourths full of soaked wheat and then salt and water added.

Mrs. Folkerth declares that making a food budget for the family is not a very hard task and that the budget made one year can be used continuously. With the budget, the Darke county homemaker claims it is possible to plan the year's gardening and canning operations so that the housewife is not faced with the necessity of using money laid aside for a new spring dress to buy fresh vegetables and meats just before the growing season begins.

Mrs. Folkerth starts her food accounting by planning stored supplies for five persons for 30 weeks. In her list is included 20 pints corn, 15 pints peas, 90 quarts tomatoes and tomato juice, 30 quarts green beans, 20 pints lima beans, 20 quarts greens, 15 quarts beets, and 15 pints carrots unless the latter are placed in storage. Six gallons of sauerkraut and 225 quarts of fruits add variety and needed food elements to the diet.

The canned supply of vegetables is supplemented with 20 bushels Irish potatoes, 4 bushels sweet potatoes, 1 bushel dry beans, 50 heads cabbage, and any squash, turnips or celery that are in the garden at the end of the growing season. Mrs. Folkerth says the amounts of vegetables can be varied so there is less of one and more of another if the family prefers some varieties more than others.

The meat supply is an important item in Mrs. Folkerth's planning. She includes 350 pounds pork, 50 cans beef, and 100 pounds of lard.

WOMAN, 70, DIES WHILE WALKING ALONG HIGHWAY

Mrs. Caroline Buzzard, 70, Several Months, Victim Of Heart Attack

FUNERAL TUESDAY 2:30

Attempt To Find Home For Dog Ends Fatally

Mrs. Caroline Buzzard, 70, of Wayne township, was found dead along Route 104, Saturday night, the victim of a heart attack.

Mrs. Buzzard was the housekeeper at the home of Charles Meinfelter, who resides along Route 104, south of Route 22. Mrs. Buzzard was walking to the Thomas farm at the intersection of Routes 104 and 22 when she was stricken. Her body was found by passing motorists. The sheriff's department and Coroner C. E. Bowers were called.

Mr. Meinfelter said Mrs. Buzzard had been in ill health for about six months. She had been especially nervous Saturday, he said.

At the time of her death Mrs. Buzzard was trying to help a stray dog find its way home. Mr. Meinfelter said a shepherd dog had followed Mrs. Buzzard to the Meinfelter home Saturday afternoon after she had visited neighbors. She believed the dog belonged to a tenant on the Thomas farm and she was taking him to the farm when she died.

Missing Several Days
The sheriff's department later found the dog belonged to Duke Watson, Half avenue. The dog had been missing for several days.

Mrs. Buzzard was born on April 4, 1867, the daughter of John and Cynthia Kegg. She was a lifelong resident of Pickaway county.

Surviving are her husband, William Buzzard, Circleville, and five children, Mrs. Mabel Garrett; Alonzo Buzzard, Circleville township; Charles Buzzard, Wayne township; Mrs. Helen Hoover, Jackson township; and Mrs. Elizabeth Martindale, of Franklin county.

The body was removed to the Albaugh chapel where services will be held Tuesday at 2:30 p. m. with the Rev. Robert T. Kelsey, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, officiating. Burial will be in the Darbyville cemetery.

MUSEUM ADDS ELUSIVE OKAPI TO LIFE GROUP

PHILADELPHIA (UP)—The first habitat group of the okapi, a giraffe-like animal found only in the northeastern section of Belgian Congo, has been placed in the African Hall of the Academy of Natural Sciences.

The George Vanderbilt African expedition of 1934, which trekked 4,000 miles across the dark continent in search of natural history material for the museum, brought back two okapi. Vanderbilt and his wife came here from New York for the dedication.

The famed explorer, Henry M. Stanley "donkey" which inhabited the Ituri forest of the Congo, but it was not until 1900 that even a small piece of the okapi's hide was obtained by a white man.

The two animals brought here were among the Vanderbilt expedition's rarest finds.

Brief Items of Interest to Pickaway Farmers

Disease bacteria hold annual reunions in uncleaned poultry houses and on contaminated ranges.

Livestock get valuable nutrients from early pasture but continuous, close grazing may cause a 50 per cent reduction in the year's total forage produced by the pasture.

Statistics seem to prove that farmers buy twice as many used cars as new cars but R.F.D. Brown says this is not because glossy paint is hard on rural eyes.

Dairy cows on February 1 were unconcerned about the decline in prices for dairy products and continued a high level of production. Average production per cow was the highest for that date in the past five years.

Ohio county agricultural agents have lists of members of the Ohio Seed Improvement Association who have hybrid corn, small grains, and soybeans which have been inspected and found eligible for sale as registered or certified seed.

Persons who like the out-of-doors have set all indoor attendance records at Baltimore, Maryland. The 125,000 paid admissions to the recent Outdoor Life Show broke the former record for indoor meetings in that city established by people who visited the National Flower and Garden Show two years ago.

A federal research laboratory for the study of poultry diseases will be placed at Michigan State College, East Lansing. Ohio poultrymen and the Ohio State university poultry department have a major share in the work to have this station established but Ohio State university was unable to furnish the land required to have the station located in this state.

Manager of Orelton Acres Near London Confers With Agent

RECORDS ARE NECESSARY

Successful Enterprises and Losers Learned

G. W. Putnam, manager of the 4,837-acre Orelton Farms, near London, Ohio, tells Lyman Baker, county agricultural agent of Madison county, that one of the things he has learned as manager has been the necessity of keeping accurate cost records of the various crop and livestock enterprises.

Mr. Putnam believes complete records are just as important to the average Ohio farmer as they are on the large tract of land he manages. He admits that most farmers are very busy and that it is difficult to find time each day for much bookkeeping but he claims that it is possible to make simple notes of daily transactions and then bring the books up to date on rainy days.

The Orelton farm manager says that it is impossible to determine which enterprises are profitable and which lose money unless accurate accounts are kept. He gives as an example the fact that all livestock enterprises on the Orelton Farms were conducted at a loss in 1937 but all crop operations were profitable except the production of wheat.

Mr. Putnam says this set of circumstances may be almost exactly reversed in other years. However, over a period of years, it is possible to tell which phases of farming are most likely to bring profits and the farm operations can be planned to give the most time and labor to the things which are most likely to be profitable.

THOMAS J. BURGETT AND RUSSELL IMLER APPOINTED TO ELECTION BOARD

MEN TO RETAIN COUNTY OFFICES FOR FOUR YEARS

Secretary of State Abides By Recommendation Of Committees

BOTH ARE SERVING NOW

Changes Made in Fairfield, Fayette Units

Reappointment of two members of the Pickaway county board of elections was announced Monday by William J. Kennedy, secretary of state.

Those named were Thomas J. Burgett, of Orient, Republican, and Russell Imler, E. Mound street, Democrat. Both received the endorsement of their respective committees. Mr. Burgett has been chairman of the board. Their present terms expire Tuesday. Under the new appointments they will serve until Feb. 28, 1942.

Terms of only two board members expire this year. Other members of the board are Orin W. Dreisbach, Republican, Circleville township, and James Tootle, Democrat, of Monroe township.

The list of appointments included two new members on the boards of Fairfield and Fayette counties. H. H. Wolfinger, Democrat, of Lancaster, was named on the Fairfield board. C. M. Raab, Republican of Canal Winchester, was re-appointed.

Thurman Sholey, Democrat, of Bloomingburg, Route 1, was re-named on the Fayette county board. Glenn B. Rodgers, Republican of Washington C. H., is the new member.

Mrs. Novella Craft, was hostess to the Standard Bearers of the M. E. church Wednesday evening Feb. 16. Virginia Thomas presided in the absence of the president. During the business session, after the reading of the minutes and roll call, a discussion was conducted concerning the presentation of a play in the church.

Esther Lutz was the program leader for this meeting. After the reading of the scripture, from the 15th chapter of Matthew, a prayer was sung by Jean Potts. The play of the month "The Black Tent" was reviewed by Virginia Thomas. Jo Ann Bope played a piano solo, "Arbutus". A reading was given by Florence Rose followed by a group song, "Send the Light". Jean Potts was appointed leader for the next meeting and Laura Faye Dix will conduct the games. Games in keeping with the month were enjoyed, and the hostess served light refreshments. Those present were Jo Ann Bope, Jean Potts, Virginia Thomas, Betty Crites, Mae Bussert, Ivy Belle Spung, Esther Lutz, Beatrice Jane Johnston, Florence Rose, Laura Faye Dix and Novilla Craft.

Mrs. Alice Myers visited with her sister, Mrs. Samantha Miesse, from Wednesday until Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Griner were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Pinney of Derby, Sunday.

HERE are suggested North-South and East-West super-highways, which would be constructed by the federal government at a cost of eight billion dollars, to be paid for eventually through tolls and leases to highway rights. According to the plan, there would be three transcontinental highways and six North-South routes. Author of the plan is T. E. Steiner, Wooster, Ohio, industrialist. Senator Robert J. Bulkley of Ohio took it up, and now the administration supports such a proposal.

Use of Home Products Urged by Farmerette

Ohio homemakers who buy corn for $2.80 per bushel and wheat at the rate of $15 per bushel in the form of breakfast cereals have not investigated thoroughly the advantages of using home products, according to Mrs. George Folkerth, Greenville.

Mrs. Folkerth says a supply of corn dried soon after harvest and a peck of wheat cleaned thoroughly in the fall while the seed wheat is prepared for planting will furnish materials for many tasty dishes. The wheat can be washed and dried thoroughly to prepare it for home use.

Part of the corn can be ground into meal and another portion reserved to be hulled with lye for hominy. The hominy can be canned and held for use at any time. Mrs. Folkerth recommends cracking some of the wheat in a food grinder or coffee mill and canning the rest.

Her method of canning wheat is to soak the grains for 24 hours in water and then process it in a pressure cooker for four hours or until the grains begin to burst. She advises women who try this method for the first time that five pints of dry grain will make 10 cans of cooked wheat and that cans should be filled only three-fourths full of soaked wheat and then salt and water added.

Mrs. Folkerth declares that making a food budget for the family is not a very hard task and that the budget made one year can be used continuously. With the budget, the Darke county homemaker claims it is possible to plan the year's gardening and canning operations so that the housewife is not faced with the necessity of using money laid aside for a new spring dress to buy fresh vegetables and meats just before the growing season begins.

Mrs. Folkerth starts her food accounting by planning stored supplies for five persons for 30 weeks. In her list is included 20 pints corn, 15 pints peas, 90 quarts tomatoes and tomato juice, 30 quarts green beans, 20 pints lima beans, 20 quarts greens, 15 quarts beets, and 15 pints carrots unless the latter are placed in storage. Six gallons of sauerkraut and 225 quarts of fruits add variety and needed food elements to the diet.

The canned supply of vegetables is supplemented with 20 bushels Irish potatoes, 4 bushels sweet potatoes, 1 bushel dry beans, 50 heads cabbage, and any squash, turnips or celery that are in the garden at the end of the growing season. Mrs. Folkerth says the amounts of vegetables can be varied so there is less of one and more of another if the family prefers some varieties more than others.

The meat supply is an important item in Mrs. Folkerth's planning. She includes 350 pounds pork, 50 cans beef, and 100 pounds of lard

WOMEN CAN AID IN REDUCTION OF AUTO ACCIDENTS

Backseat driving should be done before the adviser gets in the back seat, according to Mrs. Mary E. Gerlaugh, child training specialist, Ohio State University, who says that teaching safe and sane driving is a problem for mothers along with all other agencies needed to reduce the appalling loss of life on Ohio highways.

Mrs. Gerlaugh says that parents enter the safety driving campaign because they are needed to reduce accidents caused by youthful drivers. Colonel Lynn Black, superintendent of Ohio's highway patrol, says that drivers between the ages of 16 and 22 are almost twice as likely to cause accidents as those between the ages of 40 and 49.

Youthful drivers are not physically less able to drive well than their elders, but they are much more apt to be careless and reckless. Mrs. Gerlaugh believes that a parental league to compel more attention to safe driving by young folks would get results.

She believes that isolated examples of parents who refuse their children the use of automobiles is not very effective in teaching safety. A league of parents which would refuse the use of machines to a large group of youngsters until they followed the rules of the road probably would get results because each youth would resent the reckless actions of those which might get the whole group put on the forbidden list.

Mrs. Gerlaugh thinks most of the fast driving indulged in by boys and girls is just an exhibition to impress their importance upon others of their own age. If they knew their companions would put them down as menaces to their own driving privileges, the reckless drivers would get short measures of applause from their friends.

Only four states had more motor accidents resulting in fatalities in 1937 than Ohio had. Mrs. Gerlaugh thinks that Ohio women can help influence the installation of safety driving courses in high schools and that a person who is once taught to be a good driver will remain in that class. She believes the earlier the rules of safety are learned the better for everyone.

Ohio farmers will be better able to meet present conditions of short supplies of adapted red clover and alfalfa seed by modifying some of their usual practices of seeding or by retaining some old meadows through this season, according to R. D. Lewis, extension agronomist, Ohio State University.

The first suggestion of Mr. Lewis is that the usual rates of seeding can be reduced if adapted red clover or alfalfa seed is used and the best methods of seeding are practiced. The Ohio Experimental Station bulletin No. 588 contains recommendations of dates and methods recommended for seedings.

Mr. Lewis says that on fields to be seeded which will grow good red clover, part of the usual red clover seed in the seeding mixture may be replaced by alfalfa seed. Alfalfa seed is relatively more abundant this Spring than red clover seed.

He also reminds farmers that a pound of alfalfa seed contains twice as many individual seeds as a pound of red clover seed. An increase in the proportion of alfalfa clover in the seeding mixture may be profitable in many cases. Sweet clover can be sown on fields which have sufficient lime and which are to be plowed in the Spring of 1939 or pastured in the early part of that year.

Sweet clover also can be seeded in fields which are to be planted to corn next year and the present old meadows retained. Thin stands of alfalfa which are held over can be thickened by sowing three or four pounds of timothy seed per acre in the meadows after the last cutting of hay this Summer.

A concern that offers a complete service in their line is the Circleville Implement Co., of Circleville, who are dealers for Oliver farm implements and machinery. It would be hard to over-emphasize the importance of their service to the farmers of this district.

At this establishment you will find a complete line of farm machinery as well as accessories and it is well to remember the reputation of Oliver when considering the purchase of anything in the line of farm machinery. This firm also maintains service for farm machinery and carries all necessary parts.

There may be little difference in the cost of ordinary farm machinery and that of Oliver but there is a vast difference in the satisfaction and this is best attested by the increasing number of farmers who are replacing their old machinery with Oliver implements.

Mr. Hetzler and his associates are familiar with every phase of their business and offer their patrons the benefit of their knowledge by advising them in the most helpful way as to what is best suited to their needs. We are pleased to compliment the Circleville Implement Co. as being one of this section's valued commercial assets.
